EARLY YORKSHIRE SCHOOLS,

VOL. I.

YORK, BEVERLEY, AND RIPON.

IT is strange that so little attention has been paid by archæological societies to the history of our ancient schools: institutions which are as ancient and have been more lasting and more useful than any of the other institutions which have attracted the attention of antiquaries. Like the collegiate churches, the chantries, and the monasteries, most of these ancient schools were submerged in the great revolutionary deluge we call the Reformation; but, unlike them, though many were swept away altogether, most of them escaped, and many of them, refitted and repaired from time to time, have floated proudly ever since. In no part of the country can more ancient schools, or schools with a more interesting history be found than in Yorkshire. It is the aim of this and succeeding volumes to present the original documents bearing on the history of these schools; primarily on the pre-Reformation and Reformation history. But the scope of the volumes is not confined to that period. In some cases the history will be carried down to the reign of James I.; and, in view of the complete misunderstanding which exists as to the period of the great civil war, documents throwing light on the state of schools up to the reign of Anne will be included.

It is intended to treat all the ancient schools in the county so far as possible in order of the date of their foundation. By date of foundation is meant not their commonly reputed or legal foundation, a matter on which no opinion is expressed, but the earliest date of their actual and historical existence. By ancient is meant any school the existence of which, whether in proveable continuity with an existing school or not, is traceable before the Reformation ; or, to take a more precise date, the dissolution of colleges and chantries in the second year of Edward VI., 1548. This will include not only such admittedly early foundations as Sedbergh and Pocklington, Hull and Rotherham, but such reputedly late foundations as Bradford and Beverley, and probably Leeds.

It is astonishing how on inquiry the history of schools, a comparatively recent date for which has been accepted without demur, tends to recede further and further into the past. The task of research in such matters is endless, and completeness is out of the question for any single inquirer. Wherever a grammar school now exists, ancient documents are likely to throw the history of the school back beyond the Reformation. The town clerks of ancient boroughs, the incumbents of ancient churches, particularly those which have been collegiate or in which there have been several chantries, are very likely to have, even without suspecting it, documents bearing on the ancient history of schools. In the muniment rooms of great families, whether in ancestral castles of feudal lords or in more recent manor houses of squires and others who hold lands once the possession of collegiate churches, or of the chantries scattered broadcast over the land, there probably lurk chapter act books and account rolls, deeds, and papers, sometimes in formal documents, more often in casual entries in documents having nothing to do directly with schools, which would throw floods of unexpected light on the early history of our schools.

I would venture to appeal to such owners or custodians of ancient documents to search them, or have them searched, or give facilities for search by competent persons, for references to the school, or a schoolmaster, or scholars, to payments for teaching or repair of school buildings, especially before the reign of Edward VI. I would also ask anyone who has or may come across any reference to schools or teaching before the Reformation, or who knows of any documents throwing light on the teaching, discipline, books used, or other internal economy of schools before the Reformation, or on the relations of schools, scholars, and schoolmasters to the world at large during that period, to communicate with me. It is only by the accretion of a large number of scattered facts and references, in themselves perhaps of no great interest or moment, that the lost history of English schools can be recovered.

It will perhaps be matter of surprise to some people to find that the present volume is taken up with documents bearing on the early history of three schools only, and those not the three schools which have hitherto ranked as the oldest in Yorkshire. The three schools thus assigned the first place are those of S. Peter's School, York, commonly said to have been founded by Philip and Mary, Beverley Grammar School, put down to the 17th century, and Ripon Grammar School, also attributed to Philip and Mary.

In fact they are the three existing survivals in Yorkshire of the archetypal schools of England, and we may say of Europe; the schools which were conducted by and formed an integral and important part of the foundation of the collegiate churches of secular canons, whose beginnings are grounded on guessing or lost in legend. The three schools of York, Beverley, and Ripon, I do not hesitate to affirm, existed before the Norman Conquest.

S. PETER'S SCHOOL, YORK.

In the Fortnightly Review for November, 1892, I gave a summary of the early history of S. Peter's School, York, under the title of "Our Oldest School." "An institution," I then wrote, "which existed and flourished in England in the year 730, and still exists and flourishes in the year 1892, cannot but be an interesting object of study. Such an institution is older than the House of Commons, older than the Universities, older than the Lord Mayor, older than the House of Lords, older even than the throne or the nation itself. Such an institution exists in the 'School of the Cathedral Church of the Blessed St. Peter of York, commonly called St. Peter's School.'"

It may seem a startling statement, but it is the fact that there are only two institutions in England which are older than this York Grammar School. They are the Archbishoprics of Canterbury and York. And it is perhaps doubtful whether even the Archbishopric of York is older, that is, whether its creation did not carry with it the creation of the school.

I am bound to confess, however, that the title of "Our Oldest School" was a misnomer. I fortunately guarded myself against a mistake, which I am now able to set right, by saying (p. 639): "There is indeed one school which might possibly claim an even higher antiquity than York, if it could prove its title, viz. the so-called 'King's School' at Canterbury. At present it claims only to date from Henry VIII., who is, however, no more, and in some respects perhaps less, of a true founder of that school than his daughter was of the School of York. But though the Archbishopric of Canterbury is more ancient than that of York, Canterbury Cathedral has not the same continuity of corporate existence as York Minster. Canterbury, like Winchester and Worcester, has twice undergone a violent revolution, once when the married or marriageable canons were driven out to make way for the Black monks, and again when the Black monks were driven out by Henry VIII. to make way for married or marriageable canons. Whether its school carried on its existence continuously under the monks is doubtful. The subject of monastic schools, though some writers talk freely enough about them, is very obscure, particularly on the question whether in the earlier times, i.e. before the fourteenth century, they were open to any but inmates of the monastery. At Canterbury the evidence hitherto available is ambiguous. At all events, Canterbury School has not yet found its vates sacer, or proved its title. Until it has, it must yield the palm to the established antiquity of York, which has suffered no such violent revolutions, where the minster, with its college of secular canons, has gone on in unbroken continuity at least from the days of Archbishop Egbert, who died in 734, to the present day."

I have since, myself, proved the title of Canterbury School from 621, and, by fair inference, from the days of Augustine. Yet though York cannot be placed first as our oldest school, certainly its place cannot be far from second, while its history is better preserved and more continuous than that of Canterbury or S. Paul's.

The continuous history of Christianity in York begins with Wilfrid. The success of Paulinus' mission was ephemeral, and was followed by a reaction in favour of the old religion. Wilfrid himself was frequently ejected, and it was not till his return from Rome, about the year 700, that he was firmly seated. That he founded a school with the bishopric of York is in the highest degree probable. We have positive evidence of its existence in the time of Archbishop Egbert. The earliest document in this volume is the celebrated poem of the famous schoolmaster Alcuin, Of the Bishops and Saints of the Church of York. There is now no ancient MS. of this poem in existence, but Alcuin being a saint, dearer perhaps to Germany and France than to England, as the founder of Charlemagne's so-called Palace School at Aachen or Aix-la-Chapelle, his poem was found and copied by Mabillon before the French Revolution, which destroyed much English history that had by exportation escaped the Reformation in England. It is printed in the Chronicles and Memorials of Great Britain, published under the direction of the Master of the Rolls, commonly called the Rolls Series. It is written in very fair Latin hexameters. Great part of the poem is a mere versification of Bede's Ecclesiastical History of the English. But after nearly 1,400 lines, Alcuin's "muse passes towards the end of the poem and to the deeds of his own master, the wise Albert, who took the insignia of the venerable seat (of Archbishop) after Egbert." Alcuin invites the youth of York to accompany him in his poetic walk on the subject of Albert, or Ethelbert, as his English name is written, "because he often drenched your senses with nectar, pouring forth sweet juices from his honey-flowing bosom." Albert "was born of ancestors of fame, by whose care he was soon sent to kindly school (studiis almis), and entered at the Minster in his early years that his tender age might grow up with holy understanding. Nor was his parents' hope in vain; even as a boy he grew as proficient in the understanding of books as he did in body." He became deacon (levita) when quite young (adolescens), and when still a youth (juvenis) a priest. "Then pious and wise, teacher (doctor) at once and priest, he was made a colleague of Bishop Egbert, to whom he was nearly allied by right of blood. By him he is made advocate of the clergy (defensor cleri), and at the same time is preferred as master in the city" (not be it noted in the church) "of York. There he moistened thirsty hearts with diverse streams of teaching and the varied dews of learning, giving to some the art of the science of grammar, pouring on others the rivers of the tongue of orators; these he polished on the whetstone of law, those he taught to sing together in Aeonian chant, making others play on the flute of Castaly, and run with the feet of lyric poets over the hills of Parnassus." But grammar, song, and rhetoric were not all. He taught the music of the spheres, the use of the globes, and natural history. "Others the said master made to know the harmony of heaven, the labours of sun and moon, the five belts of the sky, the seven planets, the laws of stars, the rising and falling of the wind, the movements of the sea, the earth's quake, the nature of men, cattle, birds, and beasts," "the divers kinds of numbers, and various shapes." He even taught arithmetic and Euclid. He was versed in the calendar and ecclesiastical arithmetic, a most important thing at a time when the Celtic method of computing Easter differed from the Roman method adopted by us. "He gave certainty to the solemnity of Easter's return."

"Above all" he taught theology, "opening the mysteries of holy writ" (the New Testament) "and disclosing the abysses of the rude and ancient law" (the Old Testament). Nor was his school merely a day-school. "Whatever youths he saw of eminent intelligence, those he joined to himself, he taught, he fed, he loved: and so, the teacher had many disciples in the sacred volumes, advanced in various arts." If we ask what kind of youth is referred to, the answer is, much the same kind as in the public school to-day. It was no mere choristers' school or ecclesiastical seminary. Alcuin's anonymous and almost contemporary biographer tells us (p. 234) that Helbercht, as he calls Albert, had round him "a flock of scholars from the sons of gentlemen (nobilium), some of whom were instructed in the rudiments of the art of grammar, others in the learning of the liberal arts, and some," but only some, "in the divine writings." He travelled abroad and went to Rome, and was everywhere received as a prince of doctors, and kings and princes tried to get him to stay and "irrigate their lands with learning." But he returned home, and at the request of the people became archbishop. "But his old fervent industry for reading the Scriptures diminished not for the weight of his cares, and he was made both a wise doctor and a pious priest." He built a great altar where King Edwin had received baptism, covered with silver, gold, and precious stones, and dedicated it to "Paul, the doctor of the world, whom as a doctor he especially loved." He rebuilt the cathedral, "supported on lofty columns standing on curved arches, and all glorious within with ceilings and windows, and surrounded by 30 chapels (porticibus), holding many upper chambers under divers roofs, and containing 30 altars with their various ornaments." This building was erected by his two pupils, Eanbald and Alcuin, under Albert's directions, and was consecrated to the Holy Wisdom ten days before he died. Two years and two months before his death Albert retired into private life, handing on the archbishopric to Eanbald. "But he gave the dearer treasures of his books to the other son, who was always close to his father's side, thirsting to drink the floods of learning. His name, if you care to know it, these verses on the face of them will at once betray. Between them he divided his wealth of differing kinds: to the one the rule of the church, the ornaments (thesauros), the lands, the money (talenta); to the other the sphere of wisdom, the school (studium), the master's chair (sedem), the books, which the illustrious master had collected, piling up glorious treasures under one roof." In other words, while one pupil became Archbishop, Precentor, and Treasurer, the other became Chancellor, i.e. Librarian and Schoolmaster.

Then follows the famous eighth-century catalogue of the York Minster Library. "There you will find," says the Master, with pardonable exaggeration, "the footsteps of the old fathers, whatever the Roman has of himself in the sphere of Latin, or which famous Greece passed on to the Latins, or which the Hebrew race drinks from the showers above, or Africa has spread abroad with light-giving lamp."

Theology comes first: Jerome, Hilarius, Bishop Ambrose, Augustine, S. Athanasius, or old Orosius; the great Doctor Gregory, Pope Leo, Basil, Chrysostom; and England is represented by Aldhelm of Sherborne and "Bede the Master." Among the less known names of theologians are Johannes, viz. Johannes Biclariensis, a Spaniard, who "flourished" in the latter half of the sixth century; Fulgentius, a rhetorician, c. 395; and Victorinus (Marius) who combated the Arians in 350. Boethius, 470-525, presumably for his De consolazione, figures rather oddly among the theologians. Cassiodorus (Magnus Aurelius Senator), a little later than Boethius, 468-575, perhaps took place largely because of his Reckoning of Easter, a most important point in the controversy between the Eastern and the Western Church, and in England between Celt and Saxon.

Then there were the "ancient historians," Pompeius Trogus, an Augustan writer, and Pliny. There were "the keen Aristotle himself, and the great rhetorician Tully," not, we may be sure, that Cicero's own oratory was studied, but his not very original treatise on rhetoric, the De Oratore. Then come four lines full of the names of poets. Among them appear, and that at the bottom of the list, only three classical authors, Maro Virgilius, as the exigencies of verse make him, Statius, and Lucan. Placed at the top, the Miltons no doubt to Alcuin, were Sedulius, who wrote a Paschal Hymn, c. 460, and Juvenius who turned the Bible into verse rather more than a century before, c. 330. Next are mentioned Alcimius, whose name of Avitus Alcuin for some reason transferred to Orosius, 523; Prosper, 379-455; Paulinus of Nola, 353-431; Arator, who in the middle of the sixth century versified, of all curious books to versify, the Acts of the Apostles; Venantius Fortunatus, 535-600; and L. Cecilius Lactantius Firmianus, c. 330, who ought rather to have appeared among the theologians.

The grammarians naturally appeared in force: Valerius

Probus, one of the earliest of all, who lived under Nero; Focas, i.e. Phocas who wrote a Life of Virgil in verse in the fifth century; Ælius Donatus, whose name was synonymous with a primer of grammar in the later Middle Ages, a knowledge of whom under the endearing title of "old Donatus" William of Wykeham required before admission to Winchester College; Priscian, 450-515; Servius, the great Virgilian commentator of the fourth century, who is even now quoted; Eutychius, or Eutyches, "On Verbs"; Pompey, a fifth-century grammarian; and Comminianus, or more probably Commodianus, c. 249, who was more of a poet than a grammarian, and wrote Latin verses in dispraise of Juno and the old gods—"Against the gods of the Gentiles."

Then Alcuin concludes: "You will find, reader, many other masters eminent in the schools, in art, in oratory, who have written many a volume of sound sense, but whose names it seemed longer to write in song than the usage of the bow (plectrum) allows." This is tantalising indeed, as we should like to know who the other authors were. It is idle to speculate, though one cannot help wondering whether on the one hand Ovid, so often quoted in the twelfth century, was not omitted because his name was impossible for hexameters, (though Naso presented a way round); and whether, on the other, Caedmon or Aldhelm's Saxon poems found a place in this School and Minster library.

Alcuin reigned as schoolmaster at York for some years before he was persuaded by Charlemagne to transfer his doctor's throne to the Frankish court and land, from which he only retired in old age to be Abbot of Tours. He always retained, however, a keen interest in England and things English, especially in York and its minster, and above all its school. From his published letters we cull one written to Offa, King of the Mercians (p. 9). Offa had apparently written to ask him to leave Aachen for Lichfield to found a school there. Instead, Alcuin sends one of his pupils, whose name unfortunately is not given, praising him as a good speaker, but apparently somewhat indolent and given to drink, as he recommends Offa to provide him with pupils and keep him up to the mark as a teacher, not allowing him to wander about idly or to become the servant of drunkenness. In another letter to the canons of York, written about 793, he refers with affection to his school time both as boy and master. "You," he says to the seniors, "nourished my tender years of childhood with a mother's love, you endured with pious patience the frolics of my boyhood, and with the discipline of fatherly chastisements educated me till I was grown up, and strengthened me with the learning of holy rules." Then addressing the juniors he adds: "You who in age are my sons, but by the holiness of your lives my fathers, never, I beseech you by God's mercy, forget the master of your learning. For He who sees my heart is witness how devotedly it always desired your profit in ecclesiastical study and spiritual learning. Remember me. I am yours in life and death, and perhaps God in his pity will grant that you will bury in old age him whose infancy you nourished." Then he concludes with some good advice, which savours rather of the fifteenth century than the eighth, "to avoid fine clothes like the laity" and "to tread the holy threshold of the church instead of gadding about the muddy streets of a dirty town." Three years later Alcuin writes to congratulate the then Archbishop of York, Eanbald II. (not his fellow pupil, Eanbald I.), on his accession. He congratulates himself, "the lowest slave of the church," that "I have educated one of my sons to be thought worthy of being the steward of Christ's mysteries, and to labour in my stead in the church, where I was nurtured and educated, and to preside over those treasures of wisdom to which my beloved master, Archbishop Albert, left me heir." In a passage, which is unfortunately corrupt, he then urges Eanbald to "provide masters for the boys, and to separate the clerks after the fashion of the Gauls; those who read books, who serve the chanting, and who are assigned to the writing-school, having for each class their own masters." This division of the grammar, the song, and the writing school, is a curious anticipation of the provision we shall meet with at the end of the fifteenth century by Bishop Stillingfleet and Archbishop Rotherham. They in founding their colleges of S. Andrew, at Nether Acaster, between York and Selby, and Jesus at Rotherham, respectively, provided, besides schools and schoolmasters of grammar and song, as Wykeham had done at Winchester, and Chicheley at Higham Ferrers, also for a writing master to teach "all manner of scrivener's craft," including, at Rotherham, "casting accounts." Alcuin specially recommends this, "so that in the chief seat of our race there may be found the fountain of all goodness and learning; and so the thirsty wayfarer or the lover of ecclesiastical learning may be able to draw that which his soul desires." It would appear, therefore, that the school was intended, not only for clerics and ecclesiastical amateurs, though no doubt chiefly for them, but also for the outside public, the thirsty wayfarer. The further advice to set up "guest-houses, that is hospitals, where the poor and the traveller may be received daily and receive relief at your (the archbishop's) expense," is perhaps the origin of S. Peter's, afterwards S. Leonard's, Hospital. The whole letter is a striking recognition of the doctrine laid down by Pope Gregory to Augustine of Canterbury that the revenues of the Church were chargeable with education and poor relief, as well as the support of the churches and clergy.

There is perhaps no more illuminating passage in early English history than these references of Alcuin's to the school of York. We see it here in its very beginning and earliest development; and we see the immense importance attached to it in the minster functions. Under Archbishop Egbert, Albert is the teacher. So convinced is he of the importance of learning that, when he becomes Archbishop, he does not cease to teach. At his death a division destined to be permanent takes place. One of his favourite pupils succeeds to the archbishopric, with the care of the church, its fabric, ornaments, and revenues; another succeeds to the chancellorship, with its library, its legal and above all its educational duties. In the lifetime of Alcuin a further development takes place, or at least is recommended. Instead of one master teaching everything, as Albert and Alcuin himself had done, from arithmetic to theology, a division of labour is suggested, and separation of the schools for grammar, song, and writing. The writing became afterwards a separate and inferior study. It was relegated to monks or a professional class of scribes, clerics of course, but of an inferior order. The twin masters of grammar and song continued to prevail throughout the Middle Ages. But though the Precentor, as a minster officer, took precedence of the Chancellor, the Chancellor's deputy, the Grammar Schoolmaster, occupied a superior position to that of the Precentor's deputy, the Song Schoolmaster. The latter tended to sink, as in Bishop Langley's foundation at Durham, into an elementary or preparatory schoolmaster, "to teach the petties," reading and writing. The placing of the Precentor above the Chancellor was probably a Norman innovation, since at Harold's College of the Holy Cross at Waltham, we learn from the Inventio Crucis, edited by Bishop Stubbs, that the second officer was Master Athelard, called Magister Scolarum.

Of York School, after the days of Alcuin, we learn no more for two hundred and fifty years, that is, till after the Norman Conquest. It is impossible to prove that it went on all the time. But there is every reason to think so, and no reason to think otherwise. A very few years after Alcuin's days the digest called the Corpus Juris Canonici has preserved to us a decree made under Pope Eugenius at a synod held in 826 (p. 1), which shows that the custom for the cathedral churches to maintain schools was recognised as having the force of law. "It is reported to us," says the decree, "that in some places neither masters nor a cure are found for a grammar school" (studio literarum). Therefore it is decreed that "everywhere care and diligence is to be taken by all bishops and their subjects, and in other places in which there is need, that masters and doctors shall be appointed, to teach continuously grammar schools and the precepts of the liberal arts, because in them especially the commandments of God are shown and declared." What was declared to be the duty of all bishops was not likely to be neglected in the great city of York by the primates of the Northumbrian kingdom, at a time when England was the literary light of the world. We are told in the Life of Alfred the Great by the so-called Asser, the MS. of which belonged to the tenth century, about one hundred years after Alfred's death (Annales Alfredi, ed. F. Wise, Oxford, 1722, pp. 42-3), that, while his elder children were brought up in the Court, and were able to read Saxon poems and books, "Ethelward, the youngest, by the divine counsels and the admirable prudence of the King, was sent to the grammar school (ludis litterariæ disciplinæ), where with the children of almost all the nobility of the country, and many also who were not noble, he prospered under the diligent care of his masters. Books in both languages, namely, Latin and Saxon, were diligently read in the school. They also learned to write." As I have remarked in my History of Winchester College (Duckworth and Co., 1899, p. 15): "Whether Alfred's son was really educated in the grammar school there or not, at all events the tenth century writer believed that he was; or perhaps one should say he thought such a thing possible and likely enough to be believed. Again, at Warwick, a town which at its highest was a village compared with York, among the possessions of the collegiate church there, solemnly confirmed to it by the first Norman lord and by Henry I., was "the school of Warwick as it existed in the time of King Edward" the Confessor. If Warwick Collegiate Church maintained its school, a fortiori did the cathedral church of York.

In York of all places a Cathedral Grammar School was least likely to have ceased. York was never destroyed by the Danes, though the Danes became masters of it. The regular succession of the archbishops went on. As we find the later pre-Conquest archbishops giving further endowments to their collegiate churches elsewhere, Beverley, Ripon, Southwell in Nottinghamshire, there can hardly be any doubt that they maintained in efficiency their own head church and the school of the cathedral church and city of York.

It is, however, hopeless to anticipate that any positive evidence will ever be forthcoming for this or any other fact connected with the later pre-Norman history of York.

We have specific statements from the historians that the evidence is gone, and that all the deeds, documents, and writings of the minster were destroyed when William the Conqueror, by way of illustrating the alleged superiority of Norman culture and civilisation, pillaged the city of York in 1069, and deliberately devastated the district with unexampled thoroughness and ferocity.

Unfortunately there are not extant at York, as at Salisbury, the statutes of the first Norman archbishop. The earliest evidence we have is in the history of Hugh, Precentor of York, written before 1128, the year of the death of Ralph Flambard, Bishop of Durham, whom he speaks of as still living. Of Thomas of Bayeux, the first Norman archbishop, he says: "When he undertook the archbishopric (1070) he found everything unpeopled and waste through the ravages of a hostile force. Of seven canons (for there had not been more) he found three in the burnt and destroyed church and city. The rest were either dead or had fled into exile through fear and devastation. The church was re-roofed, and according to his means rebuilt, and the canons whom he had found restored, while those who had fled were recalled, and some added for the service of God and the church. He rebuilt the refectory and dormitory; established a Provost to preside over the rest and provide for their living. He gave some manors and lands and churches, and gave back those which had been taken away by others; and ministered to the necessities of the canons from his own property. He also divided the diocese among wise and active archdeacons. After the canons had thus fed in common for some years, the archbishop determined, in accordance with advice given to him, to make a prebend or separate provision for each out of S. Peter's land, much of which was still waste, so that the number of canons might be increased, and each for himself would be more zealous to build and cultivate his own share. Which was done. For he then established a Dean, Treasurer, Precentor, giving each the honour due to the church and himself and his office (personarum): the Schoolmaster he had already established." One of the first acts of the archbishop then had been to restore the Schoolmaster. This he regarded as more important than reconstituting the church on the model of that to which he was accustomed at Bayeux. He found the church with seven canons presided over by a Provost, as at Beverley and Exeter and many of the churches of the Teutonic lands, which, rather than France, had been the English model under the English kings; and next to the Provost a Schoolmaster.

There is at Durham a charter (now printed in Feodarium Prioratus Dunelmensis, Surtees Society, 1872, edited by Rev. William Greenwell, p. lxxvii.-ix.) by which Archbishop Thomas confirms the privileges of the church of Durham, under date 8 William II., 1094, witnessed by, among other York personages, Siurus, schoolmaster (magistro scholarum). The charter has been clearly convicted by Canon Greenwell of being a forgery, like all the alleged foundation charters of Durham. But the names of the witnesses have, no doubt, been taken from genuine charters of or about the alleged date, and we may perhaps therefore legitimately claim Siurus as the first known Schoolmaster of York after Alcuin and after the Conquest, and as a specimen of the Magister Scholarum before the creation of the deanery.

It is said to have been about 1090 that Archbishop Thomas remodelled the constitution of the minster with four "persons" or dignitaries, the Dean instead of Provost, the Precentor, the Treasurer, who had the custody of the ornaments (not of the lands and money), and the Schoolmaster or Chancellor. This was the constitution also established at Salisbury by Osmund in 1090, and at Lincoln when the see of Dorchester was moved there by Remigius in 1091. To both of those sets of statutes Thomas of York was the leading witness, and in each place the statutes seem to have been due, as Mr. Bradshaw conjectured, apropos of Lincoln, to a kind of committee of which Thomas of Bayeux of York was the head (Statutes of Lincoln Cathedral, by Henry Bradshaw, Cambridge University Press, 1892, p. 35).

It is therefore safe to assume that the original statutes of York were practically identical with those of Salisbury, in which the Chancellor, the third person in rank, was also called archi-scola and magister scholarum, and one of his principal duties was scolas regere, to teach school. We have evidence that a school was going on, from the statement by Hugh the Precentor, that Archbishop Thomas II., nephew of Thomas I., was "educated and fittingly instructed among us" (apud nos, p. 11).

The Schoolmaster, this time called scholasticus, is again mentioned in 1120 (p. 11), when with two of the three Archdeacons he accompanied Thurstan, Archbishop elect, to Blois, and there petitioned the Pope to consecrate him, without first professing his obedience to Canterbury. This Schoolmaster was perhaps Hugh the historian, afterwards Precentor.

During the time of Archbishop Roger of Pont l'Evêque or Bishopsbridge (1154-1181), the school first received a separate endowment. It took the form of a grant by the Archbishop addressed to the Dean and Chapter. "I have given to the fee of your school 100s. a year, to be levied by the three archdeacons of the diocese, viz. 40s. from the Easter Synodals and Rome penny, or Peter's pence, of the East Riding, and 30s. each from the archdeaconries of the West Riding and of Nottinghamshire." The larger payment from the East Riding is noticeable. That agricultural and mercantile district was far in advance of the moors and mountains of the North and West Ridings.

It is an interesting question, which, unfortunately, there seems to be no means of determining, whether this separate endowment was due to the decretal made in the Third Lateran Council held in 1179 (p. 1). This decree said that "in order not to deprive the poor, who cannot be helped by their parents' means, of the chance of learning (legendi) and profiting, a competent benefice should be provided for a master to teach the clerks of the church and poor scholars gratis." At the same time it was ordered that no charge should be made for a licence to teach school: and that no licence should be refused to any fit person. A year or two later a mandate of Pope Alexander III. to the same effect (p. 2) is recorded as having been addressed to a Bishop of Winchester. "The more the Gallic Church shines in the knowledge and reputation of its greater dignitaries, and the more it strives to avoid all that appears to bring ecclesiastical reputations into disrepute, the more do we deem worthy of reprobation those who assume the name and dignity of schoolmaster in your churches, and yet without a certain price refuse churchmen a license to teach others." The bishop is directed wholly to extirpate this custom in his churches, and to give orders that any fit and educated (literati) men who wish to teach grammar schools (regere studia literarum) may be allowed to do so without hindrance or exaction. The disobedient were to be deprived of their dignities. If this was really addressed to a Bishop of Winchester, it must have been to Henry of Blois, who was involved in disputes as to the keeping of unlicensed schools, both in London, while he held that see in commendam, and in his own see of Winchester, apropos of a struggle between Jordan Fantosme and one Jekyll (History of Winchester College, pp. 36-9). But there are various readings given of the name of the bishop to whom it was addressed, among others Viennensi. The reference to the Gallican church, and to more than one church and chancellor under the person addressed, point to an archbishop rather than a bishop, and make the Archbishop of Vienne the most probable recipient of the mandate. In any case they testify to the universal obligation on cathedral churches in regard to schools.

These decretals were followed in 1215 by another of Innocent III. at the Fourth Lateran Council (p. 3). It recited and confirmed the decree of the former council as to the grammar schoolmaster, who is, specifically, to teach "in the faculty of grammar," and extended the requirement from cathedral churches to all others with an adequate endowment. In addition, every metropolitan or archiepiscopal church was to have a theological master "to teach the priests and others" theology, doctrinal and "pastoral." Both the grammar schoolmaster and the theologian were to be provided with prebends; though this was not necessarily to make them canons.

We have incidents at York which illustrate the sort of thing which produced the confirmatory decree of the Lateran Council. The school endowment was duly paid by the Crown, while the archbishopric was in its hands during the vacancy of the see after the death of Archbishop Roger, as shown by the Pipe Roll for 1189 (p. 14). But the archdeacons, taking advantage of the change in the see, withheld the payment, and Archbishop Geoffrey Plantagenet had to direct (p. 14) all the archdeacons of the province, here used in the sense of diocese, to make the payment to John of S. Lawrence, the Chancellor. At this time the archdeacons were aggressive, as, in 1191, Papal Commissioners (p. 14) found after solemn inquiry "that the chancellorship was the third dignity in the church of York, and that Mr. Simon of Apulia, then chancellor, took precedence next to the precentor and above the Archdeacon of York." Three years later, 1194, the Dean and Chapter obtained from Pope Celestine III. a confirmation (p. 15) of all their possessions, including "100s. belonging to the schoolmaster." Up to this time it would seem that the titles of Schoolmaster and Chancellor were interchangeable. This was also the case at S. Paul's, London, where the title of chancellor did not definitely oust that of schoolmaster till the reign of John.^a Probably it is to be inferred from the change of title that there was a change of function; the chancellor ceasing to teach school himself, and relegating his duties to a deputy. The Canon Law of 1215 perhaps stamps the date at which the chancellor finally differentiated himself into the master of a theological school; the title and duties of the ordinary schoolmaster being confined henceforth to the grammar schoolmaster.

In 1271 we find William Wykwane, afterwards archbishop, when Chancellor of York, writing to the then Archbishop Walter Giffard an epistle of a very curious character, seeing that it was addressed by a "devoted son" to his "reverend lord and father in Christ" with "all filial subjection." He tells the archbishop that "those who are ordained by God's providence to rule God's people ought to weigh their actions with such consideration and direct them with such circumspect discretion that nothing may be found in them to offend the eyes of God's majesty, or give occasion for scandal among the faithful." "Let your reverend fatherhood," he proceeds, "therefore consider what divine powers, what heraldry of human speech, may be able to pronounce on this, that the perpetual rent from the synodals due to me, and kindly paid by your predecessors from ancient times, in virtue of the chancellorship of York, whose rights and liberties I am bound to defend with all my might; you in your time, except for one term's payment, have wholly withdrawn; or rather, saving your reverence, have plundered the chancellorship of that rent, which, if it were allowed to pass in silence, would be to my prejudice and the no small damage of the chancellorship."

"Hence it is that that, after multiplying my prayers with insistence for five years, I now heap up prayers, humbly and with devotion beseeching you that the aforesaid rent so long withheld may be restored, and that your lordship may effectively order it to be paid henceforth. So recalling me, if it please you, to my former duty, who am and by God's grace shall be first of all in showing reverence, faithful in devotion, anxious for willing service, and always ready to obey your pleasure.

^a So far as the charters of S. Paul's itself are concerned I have found no use of the word chancellor before the reign of John. But in The Commune of London (Constable and Co., 1899), by J. Horace Round, p. 101, is printed a transcript of a document from the chartulary of Holy Trinity Priory, in which a certain transaction is said to have taken place, "in the second year of King Stephen, these standing by hearing and seeing Ralph, son of Algod, Ralph, Chancellor of S. Paul's," and many others named, clerks and laymen. If this document is authentic and trustworthy, as to which there is no certainty, it would put back the use of the term chancellor to 1137.

"Please let me know by the bearer of these presents what your fatherhood may think fit to do in the premises."

That so urgent an appeal had its effect need not be doubted.

Eighteen years later we have interesting proof that it was the duty of the cathedral body to provide a school building as well as a master. In 1289 Archbishop John the Roman was about to lay the foundation stone of the new and present nave of the minster. The site of the school-house, probably on the south side of the then existing nave, was wanted for the lateral extension of the nave, and was taken for that purpose. But as the school had to be provided for, an arrangement was made whereby a house of one of the non-resident canons was taken for the school, a pledge being given that if the holder of the prebend of Dunnington, whose house was thus taken, should ever come into residence another house should be found for him. The house thus assigned "for the use or place of the school (scolarum)" was to be repaired and maintained, as presumably the old school had been, at the expense of the master. This it will be seen was also the practice at Beverley in 1308 (p. 94).

The earliest extant statutes of York are contained in a Statute Book made in 1307 in accordance with an order of chapter of 6 May of that year (p. 12). They identify the Chancellor with the Schoolmaster, speaking of him as "the chancellor, who was anciently called the schoolmaster (magister scholarum)."

These statutes clearly distinguish between the Grammar School and the Song School. The Precentor collated to the latter, and any action relating to it was heard and determined by him, though the actual execution of the order made was the business of the Dean and Chapter. The Vicars' Succentor, the head of the Vicars Choral college, looked after the actual choir arrangements, made out, as we should say at Winchester, "the roll" (tabulam) of those who were to sing the various parts of the service, saw that the choir boys knew their parts, and whipped them (castigare) when necessary. He received 20s. a year from the Song School. In the same way the Chancellor collated to all Grammar Schools in the Chapter's jurisdiction, "but the School of York he ought to present to a Regent Master of Arts, of whom proficiency may be expected, and, according to the ancient custom of the church, he shall hold for three years and no more, except, by special favour, for one year more." The chancellor himself ought to be a master in theology, or as we should now say D.D., and actually to teach it near the church. He was, par excellence, the minster preacher. He opened the Christian year by preaching on Advent Sunday; he preached on the first Sunday in Lent, and at a synod he preached to the clergy, very much as the Lord High Chancellor always preached, or made the opening speech, to Parliament. He kept the seal for citations, i.e. for legal business. As the Precentor, through the Succentor, supervised the roll of singers, so the Chancellor, through the Vice-chancellor (sub-cancellarius), arranged and supervised the roll of readers of the Bible in the minster. As the Succentor looked after the choir boys, so the Vice-chancellor looked after the youth of larger growth, the incense-bearers and deacons. For his trouble he received 20s. a year from the Grammar School. The idea that the Grammar School was a mere school for choir boys is absolutely negated by the statutes of the church of York. The requirement that the master should be an M.A., when an M.A. was a rare and precious product, sufficiently shows the status of the school; but it must have been a comparatively modern, not earlier than thirteenth-century, requirement.

To finish with the Chancellor's theological school, a few extracts are given showing its importance. In 1293 the archbishop gave license of non-residence to all rectors of churches in his diocese, fit to study, who should resort to the chancellor's theological lectures. In 1332 Robert of Riplingham, the Chancellor, a former fellow of Merton, a picture of whom teaching his school is in one of the windows of the south aisle of the nave of York, bequeathed (p. 18) his professorial chair (cathedram) and desk to his successor in the chancellorship. In 1369 (p. 24) Simon of Beckingham, Chancellor, gave a robe of "white bluet" to William, clerk, his servant in his theological school (scolis). About 1408, when the Chancellor, John of Sherburn, was imbecile, the chapter made an order for a substitute, "Mr. Edmund," another canon probably, to deliver his lectures at a salary of five marks a year. In 1472, 1481, and 1482, it was made matter of complaint by the chapter at a visitation, that the Chancellor, though bound to reside and lecture, was non-resident. By that time the universities had entirely taken the place of the cathedrals as theological schools, and everywhere, as e.g. at S. Paul's in the case of William Lichfield, the chancellor's lectures were falling into abeyance.

As regards the choristers, it would be absurd to suppose that a Grammar School was kept specially for them, or that they were the chief pupils in it. On the same day, 6 May, 1307, that the order was made for the codification of the statutes, the chapter made an agreement (p. 17) with Richard of Craven for the maintenance of the choristers "in board and teaching." There were only seven of them, and the amount paid was 4*s.* 8*d.* a week, charged on Brodsworth church. This was at the rate of 8*d.* a week each, which was the amount paid for commons only of the scholars of Winchester under Wykeham's statutes in 1400, and was paid by some of the commoners then boarding in S. Elizabeth's College, while the fellow commoners paid from 10*d.* to 16*d.* a week (History of Winchester College, pp. 100, 173, 192). In 1346 (p. 21) the chapter appointed "Sir Stephen," a chaplain to one of the canons, in the same way "to take care of the choristers and that they should live with him" at a time when, there being no Grammar Schoolmaster, it is clear that he was not the same person. Seven choristers do not constitute a school. As they had a separate master to teach them, it is probable they did not even attend the Grammar School at all.

A striking extract from Archbishop Thoresby's Register, for which I am indebted to Mr. William Brown, the secretary of the Surtees Society, shows that in 1367 (p. 22) the Song School itself was not by any means confined to choristers. Mr. Adam of York, Precentor, complained that "whereas by immemorial custom the keeping school (exercitium scholarum) in the city of York, for teaching boys singing, ought to be held in a certain place belonging to the cathedral church, the appointment and removal of the rector or master of which was appurtenant to the precentorship; yet divers chaplains, holy water carriers, and many others, actually keep song schools or schools, for the instruction of boys in singing, in parish churches, houses, and other places in York, to the no small prejudice and grievance of the Precentor and his precentorship, and in manifold breach of the liberties of the cathedral church." Therefore the archbishop directed the Dean of Christianity of York to make all such masters or keepers of schools give them up within a fortnight on pain of ecclesiastical censures. The connection between schools and carrying holy water does not at first sight appear. But in 1295 at Winchester Bishop Pontissera directed that "in churches near the schools of the city of Winchester, or other walled towns (castrorum) of the diocese the holy water is to be given to be carried only by scholars," and, in 1369, Wykeham, complaining that this direction had been lately broken, and the holy water given to "married men, dissolute men not capable of such schools," especially in Winchester, directed his Official to stop the abuse (History of Winchester College, pp. 40-1). The office of holy water carrier (aquæ-bajulus) was one of the minor clerical offices which brought in fees, and was therefore given to poor clerks. If at York also the office was usually given to scholars, their eking out their subsistence by teaching was natural enough.

From the date of these statutes to the Reformation the Grammar School was duly kept up. The notices of it in the Chapter Act Books are naturally intermittent. The immediate governing body was the Chancellor, and the chapter was only in the position of a visitor who came in when there was something wrong, or was called in when there was something exceptional to be done. The Chancellor kept his own register, as we learn on the occasion already referred to (p. 26), when on his imbecility the chapter took order for the chancellorship. They ordered that "as to the prayer-books in the hands of Mr. (Domini) Chancellor, Mr. Precentor should take care of them, because he has a great breviary (portiforium), without music, concerning the dignity of the Chancellor."

The Chapter Act Books begin in 1290, but there is no mention in them of the Grammar School until 1343, when at Archbishop Zouch's visitation on 27 May (p. 18) the thirteenth article of the comperta or findings is "the Master of the Grammar School (magister scholarum gramaticalium) ought to be present at the services (divinis officiis) in the choir of York, and is not present as he is bound to be." The chapter's answer was: "The Grammar Schoolmaster is new, and moreover does what he is bound to do." In 1344 the chapter had a prolonged contest with the Chancellor, William of Abberwick, for alleged neglect of his duty in maintaining a Grammar Schoolmaster and a Vice-chancellor. On a day not stated, but which we are able to fix as before 28 November, the chapter sent him a letter expressing their astonishment at "the new and unheard of matters" which they "cannot pass over uncorrected;" that "whereas by ancient custom continually observed" there should be in the choir two persons wearing the choir habit, always supporting the offices and services in his stead, one of them called Schoolmaster and the other Vice-chancellor," now through his fault there were none. They required him peremptorily to put an end to the scandal, and provide the said persons within a fortnight.

On the 28th November the Chancellor appeared before the chapter, five canons being present with Mr. Adam of York, an advocate of the (ecclesiastical) court of York, and Mr. John of Beverley, and said by his counsel that he was ready to perform all his legal duties. As to the Vice-chancellor, he was willing to do what the statutes required as long as he was not prevented from receiving the 20s. a year from the Grammar School, just as the Succentor did from the Song School.

"As to the Grammar Schoolmaster, he was about to enter a monastic order (religionem) and had not completed his year of probation, so that he could return; but the Chancellor would use all diligence about getting and appointing a master, and if he could not find a fit one he would appoint one on the nomination of the chapter." Mr. Adam of Twiselton, the chapter's advocate, thereupon protested that they did not want to impose any new burden on the chancellorship. So at last Mr. Adam of York said the Chancellor would send to the master who had entered an order, and ask whether he was desirous of leaving and returning to school. He asked the chapter meanwhile to name a person whom he could admit to the Grammar School; the chapter said "they would not prevent his doing that in the Grammar School or from demanding the payment from the school (scolis) for the Vice-chancellor if he could do so lawfully"; a saving which looks as if the payment mentioned in the statutes of 1307 was already in abeyance. On 1 December, the Chancellor's counsel said that he had made provision for the appointment of a Grammar Schoolmaster, and asked that the process against him might be withdrawn. The chapter merely repeated their requirement that he should appoint a Vice-chancellor, "and a Schoolmaster able to serve in the church of York." As no more appears, a new master seems to have been duly appointed. But on 12 June, 1349, the chapter's counsel "warned the Chancellor to order the Schoolmaster (magistro scholarum) to wear his habit in choir and cause his school to be properly taught (debite regi)." On 21 August following, the Chancellor's will was proved before the chapter, the Black Death then raging. In the April following, the chancellorship being then vacant, the chapter appointed Mr. Alexander, rector of S. Peter the Little, guardian or keeper (custos) of the Grammar School of York. The entry in the Chapter Act Book is headed Deputatio Rectoris Scholarum, so that, though there was no Chancellor, the chapter did not venture to make a permanent appointment of a master, but only put in a deputy ad interim. On the 19th of May following they did the same for the Grammar School at Doncaster (scolarum gramaticalium de Doncastre) in the person of Sir William Stanton of Northallerton (p. 22).

The "second plague," that of 1368, produced an innovation in the tenure of the office of Grammar Schoolmaster. "Since the time of the past death, through the shortness of time and the scarcity of M.As., no M.A. caring up to then to enter on teaching the school," the Chancellor, Simon of Beckingham, appointed Mr. John of York, not according to the ancient custom for "three or, for good cause, for five years," but "until he had obtained another benefice." As this was ultra vires of the Chancellor, the appointment was expressed to be made with the consent and leave of the Chapter, and was confirmed by them. The document is a striking example in a new field of the ravages caused by the successive plagues, which thus caused better terms to be given to the labourers in the field of knowledge as it did in that of agriculture. The same succession of plagues sent William of Wykeham into holy orders, and, according to his own statement, was the cause of the foundation of Winchester College.

Next year we get an all too rare piece of information as to the numbers attending Grammar Schools. Richard of Beckingham, advocate of the court of York, and probably a relation of the Chancellor's, gave by will, 23 May (p. 24), 2d. each "to 60 poor clerks of the Grammar School, to be named by the Schoolmaster on a roll (rotulo), not bad boys (non discoli), to say the whole of the psalms after the burial service for his soul and the souls for which he was bound to pray." Twopence each was the common payment given at Winchester and Eton Colleges by the founders of obits there. The number 60 was not the whole number, but selected from the well-behaved boys, so that the total must have run into three figures.

The only other indication of the numbers at York is a statement (p. 31) in the Valor Ecclesiasticus, taken by Henry VIII. in 1535 to ascertain the amounts to which he was entitled for first-fruits and tenths. S. Mary's Abbey, whose beautiful ruins stand hard by the gate of York near the minster, maintained, and had always maintained from the days of William Rufus, a boarding-house, "called Conclave or the Clee," for fifty boys who attended the school (scola) of the minster. The number was not so very far short of the famous seventy of Wykeham himself.

John of York, the master appointed in 1368 till he should obtain a benefice, found schoolkeeping better than a benefice, as he remained for at least eleven years, being in 1380 among those admitted as freemen of the city of York (p. 26). In 1375 (p. 25) he had invoked, through the Chancellor, Mr. Thomas of Farnilaw, the powers of the chapter, as Ordinary, to put down a rival and unlicensed grammar schoolmaster in the same way as we saw the precentor getting unlicensed song schools put down. The Chancellor complained that Mr. Nicholas of Ferriby kept a grammar school (scolas gramaticales) in the city of York within the chapter jurisdiction "heedlessly and unjustly to the gross prejudice and loss of the Chancellor and Mr. John of York, Rector of our Grammar School of York," and they therefore directed one of their vicars choral and their apparitor, or summoner, to warn him to give it up, under pain of the greater excommunication. We shall see (pp. 80m to 92) several cases of the exercise of this jurisdiction by the chapter of Beverley in 1304 to 1306. Instances of it occur at S. Paul's, London, in 1137, and at Winchester in 1180 or thereabouts (History of Winchester College, pp. 37-9), while at Canterbury a whole series of documents is extant, for 1307-22, which show that the grammar schoolmaster possessed the right of putting down rivalry by himself excommunicating his rivals. Similar rights were exercised by the Abbot of Walden at Saffron Walden in 1475, and at Winchester as late as 1629 (History of Winchester College, p. 330). Some people are of opinion that it is a misfortune that there is no public authority possessing a similar power now. That is, however, too large and too vexed a question for these pages. For historical purposes it is interesting to remark that the exercise of this jurisdiction is one, and perhaps the most salient, proof of how entirely schools, scholars, and learning were in pre-Reformation times matter of ecclesiastical (not monastic) law and under the cognisance of the ecclesiastical courts.

In 1397 we hear of Mr. Walter Heriz (Herries), master of the Grammar School of York, being admitted as a freeman of the city. In 1411, the chancellor being non-resident, complaint was made that both schools, of song and grammar, are "held without the will and examination of the precentor and chancellor to whom the collation to them belongs." What the precise meaning of the complaint may be is not clear.

It could hardly be that someone had usurped the school of his own motion. Perhaps the master was negligent and there was no one to keep him up to the mark.

In 1426 (p. 27), the chancellorship being vacant by promotion of John Rykyngale or Rickinghall to the see of Chichester, the chapter did what they did not venture to do in 1350, and appointed Mr. Gilbert Pinchbeck, not deputy and keeper of the school, but actual master and rector. He was appointed nominally for the ancient term of three years only. The chapter, perhaps doubting their power of appointment, at the same time prohibited everybody from "holding or keeping an adulterine grammar school in the city of York or any other place within ten miles distant without special licence from them or the chancellor." Pinchbeck held for over thirty years. In 1453 he is entered as a creditor of William Duffield, a residentiary canon, to the amount of 8*d*. His epitaph in the minster (p. 28), given in Drake's Eboracum, asks for prayers for the souls of himself, "formerly master of the grammar school (scolarum) of S. Peter of York, who died 31 January, 1458, and his wife, Agnes, who died October, 1431." The mention of the wife shows that he was a layman. The same was the case with the next two masters of the school, Mr. Roger Lewsay, whose will was proved by his wife, 12 June, 1465, and John Hamundson, "master of the Grammar School of Blessed Peter of York," whose will, dated 31 July, 1472, constitutes his wife Alice his executrix. He bequeathed "a book of chronicles in English written on paper"; and a book called Papias on the Elements (of grammar) to his step-son, William Leeds; and another book "called Horse-head" to his nephew, son of Robert Benington, mayor of Hull.

There would be nothing strange in the grammar school-masters being laymen. Clerks they were of course, but they stopped short of holy orders, which began at the sub-deaconry. It is highly probable that in the largest grammar schools it was the rule for the masters not to be in holy orders. In 1432 the founder of Sevenoaks Grammar School, John Sevenoaks, expressly prescribed that the master should "by no manner of means be in holy orders." As Mr. William Harding, or Hardinges, the master of Beverley Grammar School 1436-1456 (p. 103-9), constantly served as one of the governors or "corporation" of the town of Beverley, it seems probable that he was a layman. At Winchester in 1535 the head master of Winchester is expressly recorded to be a layman; and it was provided in regard to several of the Obits held in the college chapel that the head master was to have "1s. if a priest, 8d. if not," for attendance at them (History of Winchester College, p. 243), showing that it was expected that he might not be in holy orders. As we shall see, Archbishop Holgate, in founding his three grammar schools in York, Old Malton, and Hemsworth, in each case provided that the master might be a layman and married; as Colet had done at S. Paul's in 1512, and as Bishop Oldham did at Manchester in 1525. The first two head masters of S. Paul's School were laymen, Lilly and his son-in-law Right-wisely or Righteous; as was the first master of Malton, Thomas Norman, who became Holgate's own father-in-law.

An epitaph in All Hallows in the Pavement (Drake's Eboracum, p. 295), may give us another master of the Grammar School of York. It requested prayers for the soul of John Gylliot, a master of grammar (gramatice magistri), formerly parson in the collegiate church of S. John of Beverley, who died 19 July, 1484.

In 1486 (p. 29) James Sheffield was given "the teaching and keeping (regimen et exercitium) of the grammar school in the city of York," and appointed "master, teacher, and governor of the school (scolarum) to instruct and inform (informandum) scholars and pupils in the art of grammar, for term of his life." The appointment was made by Thomas Chaundler, Dean of Hereford and Chancellor of York, author of an MS. book on William of Wykeham and early Wykehamists of note, ex-Warden of Winchester and of New College, and ex-Chancellor of Oxford University. By reason of its departure from the statutory term, the appointment was confirmed by the dean and chapter and entered in their books. It is noteworthy that this appointment contained a power of removal of the master, if after three warnings for continual illness or other lawful cause, or neglect, he refused to provide a substitute. Like that of 1426, it contained a clause specially forbidding rival grammar schools or masters within ten miles of York, "privileged places only excepted." The exception refers to such a place as S. Leonard's Hospital, where twelve choristers were boarded and taught grammar and song (p. 38). Sheffield died in 1506, but his will does not mention that he was master of the grammar school.

No further mention of the school has been found in the chapter books before the Reformation, whence it may be concluded that it went on in due order.

In 1535 the Valor Ecclesiasticus, already quoted as to the boarding house in S. Mary's Abbey, implies that the school was still going on, as those boys attended it. The account given of that boarding house is extremely interesting, as it shows the way in which, if at all, the monasteries contributed to general education. The school is mentioned among "the alms and distributions" which the monastery claimed should be deducted from the gross value on which they were to pay first-fruits and tenths. "In the like alms anciently distributed and paid for the maintenance of fifty scholars daily spending the night and dwelling in a certain mansion called Conclave, otherwise the Clee, by the outer gate of the monastery aforesaid, and studying the art of grammar in the school of the metropolitical church" (scola, the first instance of the York School being spoken of in the singular number), "viz. on behalf of the abbot six of the same scholars, on behalf of the prior of the said monastery two, and on behalf of each of the twenty-two senior monks one, making in all thirty, whom the abbot and convent are anciently bound to maintain, besides twenty other scholars there, maintained out of the broken victuals of the convent, who altogether amount to fifty scholars studying there as above appears; with 26s. 8d. for the fee of Henry Nicholson, bailiff and keeper (custodis) and governor of the said inn called le Clee, by ancient foundation of the said monastery by the ancestors of the most dread lord the now King Henry VIII., total, £61 6s. 8d." The only other expenditure by the abbey on education was for "two clerks at Oxford or Cambridge, a monk at £10, and a secular clerk at 66s. 8d. (a year), issuing," not out of the abbey revenues, but "out of the church of Hornsey, by the foundation of William Welles, Bishop of Rochester."

The abbey, therefore, did not maintain a grammar school of its own for outsiders, but only, as part of its expenditure on alms, maintained some poor scholars in S. Peter's School. It would be interesting to learn more, but most of the records of the abbey were burnt at the destruction of the tower, which held the records of the Council of the North at the siege by Fairfax.

The Valor Ecclesiasticus itself so far as York Minster is concerned has disappeared, so we do not learn what sum, if any, beyond the old endowment of £5 a year, was paid for the grammar school.

The injunctions given by Edward VI.'s commissioners (p. 32) on 26 October, 1547, were identical in terms with those given to other cathedrals. Item 20, which refers to the grammar school, is obviously general, and has no special application to any individual case, providing as it does for the establishment of a free grammar school "in every cathedral church where no free grammar school is founded already within the close, nor hath any such school near unto it adjoining founded by any person." The emphasis is no doubt on the word "free." There was already an obligation to keep a grammar school. The reference to neighbouring schools is aimed at such a case as Winchester, in which cathedral alone, of Henry VIII.'s foundations, no provision was made for a grammar school on account of "that famous foundation of Bishop Wickham" hard by, or as S. Paul's, where Dean Colet's Free School had absorbed the old Cathedral School. Where there was no free grammar school, one was to be maintained out of the common fund of the church, with stipends for the master of twenty marks (£13 6s. 8d.) and a house, for the usher half that and a chamber free. The Chapter were also to see that every chorister who had served for five years was, when his voice broke, sent to a grammar school with an exhibition of £3 6s. 8d. a year. A provision of this kind had already been made by Henry VIII. in the cathedrals of his new foundation. It was now extended to cathedrals like York and Lincoln. The injunction as to the grammar school being free would not have been operative in the case of York, if the Cathedral Grammar School was, as one suspects, not free, for Archbishop Holgate's own Free Grammar School in the close had been founded only a few months before.

In 1552 Archbishop Holgate, holding a visitation of the minster, directed "that the deacons," if they did not "apply themselves to the grammar school daily after three monitions," or "not applying their books for their better advancement in learning," were to be expelled. It is clear, therefore, that the Cathedral Grammar School was still going on, and that the younger members of the cathedral staff, far above choir-boys in age and position, were required to attend it.

The injunctions of Edward VI. and of Archbishop Holgate are evidence enough, if evidence were really needed, that the Reformers were anxious to preserve the grammar schools. The Catholics under Queen Mary were no less interested in learning. Both parties in fact were eager to "capture the schools." At the Synod of Westminster, held under the legatine authority of Cardinal Pole in 1555 (Wilkins' Concilia. iv. 125), it was decreed (p. 235) that "in every cathedral church a certain number of boys, a kind of seminary, according to the revenue of each, shall be maintained and taught free." They were to be taught grammar and instructed in the discipline of the church. They were to be in two classes, the elder to be acolytes and to be promoted to benefices when of age, the others to succeed them. "Other boys of the same city and diocese may be taught grammar and letters with them, provided only that they be of gentle birth (honesti) and use the same clothing and mode of life (moribus); and these may be admitted to the places of the clerks, if any for any reason are wanted." To provide the funds both to pay the masters and keep the boys, all archbishops and bishops were to pay $\frac{1}{40}$ th of their net incomes, after deducting tithes, tenths, and other outgoings, and all holders of benefices of £20 a year and upwards were to pay the same, the bishop and chapter to nominate the collectors. Whether this magnificent scheme, which would have endowed in an adequate way the schools in all the cathedral cities, was ever really put into operation, I am not aware. It seems to have been sufficient, the Archbishop of York being Chancellor, to put pressure on the Dean and Chapter of York to do something to supply the want of the 50 boys boarded in the close of S. Mary's Abbey. With this end they procured the appropriation to themselves for the purposes of the school of an old hospital known as the Bootham or Horsefair Hospital, from its lying in the open space of ground outside Bootham Bar, used for the horse fair.

This hospital had been founded by a Dean of York, Master Robert of Pickering, a considerable lawyer, who was also a canon of Beverley, where he looms largely in the Chapter Act Book (edited by me for the Surtees Society). He was, Canon Raine informed me, one of the Bruces of Pickering, who on taking orders dropped his family for his place name, like the Percy who was Bishop Alnwick of Lincoln in the next century. The date of foundation is very oddly given in one Chantry Certificate (p. 41) as 12 Edward II., 2 March, 1330, while in another the chantries connected with it are said to have been founded, one by Archbishop William Melton, the other by Robert and William Pickering. 12 Edward II. would be 1318-9. 1330 would be the fourth year of Edward III. The undated ordinance (p. 33) of Archbishop William, if it belongs to 1330, must be Melton's, and if it belongs to 12 Edward II. must be Archbishop William Greenfield's. It is more probable that 12 Edward II. is the correct date, as the Inquisition ad quod damnum was taken 29 Sept., 8 Edward II., 1314. (No. 137). The Inquisition shows that even before that time the site was dedicated to pious uses, being described as a "chapel of the Blessed Mary where the Prior and Friars of the Order of the Blessed Mary of Mount Carmel used to live." The Ordinance shows that the hospital was founded for a master to act as chaplain, and, two other chaplains to pray for the soul of Edward II., Walter Langton, Bishop of Lichfield, the archbishops and canons of York, Mr. Robert Pickering and Mr. William Pickering, (who preceded him as dean), Thomas of Fishborn and all the faithful departed; and "for 6 other chaplains old and sick, not able to perform divine service." The master was to perform service daily. He was to pay £10 a year to the sub-treasurer of the minster for two chaplains, chantry priests, to be called "parsons" (as were the other chantry priests of York) to pray one for the archbishop and his successors, the other for the two Pickerings and the rest. It is in virtue of this chantry that the Chantry Certificate has converted Melton the recipient of the benefit into a founder. The sick chaplains were to have a shilling a week, about £1 of our money, for commons, the same as a fellow of Winchester College, and 6s. 8d. a year for clothes. The two hospital chantry chaplains were to have 24s. a year for clothes. The endowment was the Rectory of Styvelingeflete, or Stillingfleet, the rector of which was pensioned off with £26 13s. 4d. a year, and a vicar was established instead. At the time of the Valor Ecclesiasticus, 1535, and the Chantry Certificate, 1548, the two chantry priests in the minster were duly paid, and also the two chaplains in the hospital were duly found, but the six decayed chaplains, or, as the certificate puts it, the "six lame priests not able to minister" were "not found, for the possessions will not extend thereto." The master, however, pocketed the residue, £11 6s. 8d. The master was Mr. Thomas Magnus, a noted diplomatist of the day, who had some very fine possessions, being also master of S. Leonard's Hospital (p. 38), which brought him in about £200 a year, or £4,000 of our money, sacrist or warden of the chapel of the Holy Sepulchre, a destroyed collegiate church built against the north wall of the minster, archdeacon of the East Riding, and holding many other preferments in other cathedral, collegiate, and parish churches. He used his wealth, among other purposes, for the munificent endowment (for he was not as commonly reputed, the founder) of the Grammar and Song Schools at his native place, Newark, Notts.

By Mary's reign Magnus was dead, and Robert Johnson, Bachelor of Canon Law, was master. The dean and chapter therefore petitioned the authorities for the grant of this hospital to the school. It took a vast number of documents to effect the transformation. First came a licence in mortmain from the Crown for the master and fellows of the hospital to grant, and the dean and chapter to receive the hospital. The letters patent bear eloquent testimony to the state of the hospital. "For many years past, partly through the malice of the times, partly through the negligence of men, or rather their inexhaustible greed, the original foundation of the hospital has been ignored, and it has long remained empty, so that while retaining the name of hospital it has lost all the merit of a hospital and place of pity, and no hospitality is kept in it, no poor are there maintained, and lastly no beauty of divine worship is there preserved, but all the revenues of the same hospital are improperly converted to the use of a master and 2 chaplains always living away from the hospital, and probably benefited elsewhere; and the chapel there, as the remains of it show, fairly built and to which a sufficient number of ministers was assigned, is so rent and ruined in walls, structure, and roof that it cannot easily be repaired and restored to its original purpose; to the injury of its founders and the peril of the souls of those who thus abuse it." A perusal of the Chantry Certificates shows that this description might have been applied to many another hospital in the country. In case after case we read that there are no sick or poor, and the master, or sometimes the master and fellows, take the whole income. In the case of lepers' hospitals of course there was a bonâ fide failure of the objects of the trust; but in hospitals for the sick and the poor there was no such excuse. The Savoy Hospital in London was a notable example. The desertion of the Horsefair Hospital was solemnly proved by witnesses before the archbishop's vicar-general (p. 57). According to them the very chambers in which the chaplains and poor were to lie were "very ruinous and almost fallen to the ground," "the rents and profits had been let on long leases," and, it is said, somewhat inconsistently, that "Lord Wharton and Sir Thomas Curwen and other laymen hired the hospital from the master for the time being, and lived in it as renters at certain times and not otherwise." They used it in fact as a town house. Under these circumstances, the master and two fellows (who received pensions for life) and the patrons, Lord Eure, Thomas Egglesfield of Barton in the Willows, gentleman, and Richard Marshall, gentleman, consenting, the Crown found no difficulty in granting the licence to the dean and chapter to convert the Hospital into a grammar school "so that in the cathedral church and elsewhere divine worship, almost vanished in the past time of pernicious schism, may be more becomingly adorned." The dean and chapter were to found the school "in or near the city of York, in such place as they might think fit," with a master or pedagogue and a sub-pedagogue or under master, ludi magistrum seu pedagogum, unumque sub pedagogum vel hipodidasculum, as they are called in the affected language of the period. The scholars were in no way limited, being "boys and youths of this kingdom," and were to be taught gratis. The school was to be "called 'the School of the Cathedral Church of S. Peter of York,' and to depend solely and wholly on the same church as a member on its head." The dean and chapter were to make statutes with the approval of the archbishop. They were also at liberty to receive further endowments under the Act 1 and 2 Philip and Mary suspending the Statute of Mortmain "for the grant of lands to holy places for twenty years."

Next came the grant by the master and fellows of the hospital dated 5 April; the letter of attorney by the dean and chapter to receive "livery of seisin," or in modern parlance, to take possession, on 30 April; with note of delivery to Mr. George Williamson, canon and prebendary, on 3 May.

On 30 April the dean and chapter also executed the foundation-deed (erectio) of the grammar school. Their preamble is interesting:—

"Among other works of piety by which it is fitting that we should be moved, that is of the first consideration, and first to be desired, by which the Christian religion may be propagated, and by which in the church militant shepherds may everywhere be preferred who with the sword of the spirit, that is the word of God, may be able to drive away and put to flight the rapacious wolves, that is, devilish men ill understanding the Catholic faith, from the sheepfolds of the sheep intrusted to them, which object we hope may be more easily attained if the giddy and ignorant youth is kept in tight reins by the work of schoolmasters, and having been exercised alike in letters and learning as in sound morality may afterwards pass into the broad field of sacred and canonical literature and emerge learned." So welcoming Pole's synodical decree they founded a grammar school (scolam gramaticalem) of fifty boys, "if the rents of the school are sufficient, to be taught in our house, late called the Hospital of Blessed Mary outside Bootham Bar of the City of York, called in the vulgar tongue the Horse Fair."

All was not yet done. Papal and archiepiscopal sanction were needed for the appropriation of a hospital for the poor to the chapter and its school. This, however, had already been provided for. On 15th March letters had been written by Cardinal Pole, as legate a latere, to the Archbishop of York, legate, or his vicar-general, directing him to inquire, and, if necessary, sanction the proposed appropriation.

On 30 April, the day on which the chapter purported to found the school, they appointed a strong body of counsel, two "masters," notaries public, and three literates, to appear and present this letter to the vicar-general. On 5 May the vicar-general sat in the minster, "in the usual place," the Consistory Court, and heard the case, Mr. John Shillito leading for the chapter. Judgment was at once given, suppressing the hospital, and "appropriating, applying, annexing it to and incorporating it with the chapter house for the use and advantage of the scholars, to be boarded and taught in the school erected, founded, and established in the said hospital by the said dean and chapter." Yet one more confirmation had to be obtained, that of the archbishop as archbishop, and this was given by a deed of 20 May.

Then on 2 July, 1557, an agreement in English was entered into with the patrons of the hospital, Lord Eure and the others, whereby they were given rights of patronage of "eight poor children" as scholars, viz. Lord Eure to appoint four scholars, and the other two, two scholars each. The deed gives the contemporary English of the Latin of the other documents, and it is noteworthy that it translates 'gratis' by 'freely.' The dean and chapter "will name and appoint one well learned scole maister and one sufficient usher, and a certayne convenient nombre of scolars therein to be frelie taught theyre grammer and to have theyre meat, drink, and all sufficient and necessarie education frelie and from tyme to tyme for ever, which said scholars shall there remayne and be frelie taught theyre grammer, having theyre finding aforesaid unto such tyme as they or any of theym shall be of age and disposed to be priests, able to serve in the said cathedrall church of York or other places within the said diocese or elsewhere."

So the long preliminaries came to an end. The odd thing is that we do not know when the Cathedral Grammar School was moved to the hospital, or whether any boarders were placed in it. It would almost appear that the death of Pole and Mary, which took place within six months, put a stop to the school being moved. For the will of Roger Dalison, Precentor of Lincoln, dated 1 May, 7 Elizabeth, gave the dean and chapter a rent charge of £4 a year charged on his manor of Hartesholme "to the use of some grammar school already erected or to be erected within the city of York." The words look as if the school was not then established. The first absolute evidence of the school being in the hospital is (p. 66) the appointment

10 May, 1575, of "William James, M.A., schoolmaster of the Free School in the Horse Fair near the city of York now vacant by the lawful removal of John Fletcher, last master of the same." For what cause John Fletcher was removed we are not told. The new master was to hold "at the pleasure of the dean and chapter." He did not make a long stay, as on 5 March following, on his resignation, a successor, J. Pulleyne, B.A., was appointed, with a clause stating that he had "first read and subscribed the articles of the synod of 1562, after making oath of obedience to the Queen's Majesty and her successors, and renouncing all foreign and usurped power." This clause subsists as late as 1660. It may be that Fletcher's and James's difficulties arose from that test.

In 1585 the chapter bought up the rights of presentation of scholars possessed by Lord Eure and the son of Richard Marshall, and in 1589 that possessed by the descendant of the third patron. Marshall was paid £20, Lord Eure £50, and Eggesfield £26 13s. 4d., substantial sums when multiplied by ten or twelve for their modern equivalent.

In 1621, in the reign of James I., being harassed probably by informers as to "concealed lands," a confirmatory patent was obtained by the chapter.

Most writers have assumed that, during the Civil War, Parliament was hostile to grammar schools, and endeavoured to destroy them, or allowed them to be destroyed or damaged. The very reverse of this is the case. As I have shown in my Winchester College (p. 344 seq.), special provisions were made for the protection of Winchester and Eton. Special provision was also made for Westminster School, which was placed under the governance of a special committee, and the great Dr. Busby, Royalist though he was, remained undisturbed in his headmaster's chair. By the Act of 30 April, 1649, c. 24, abolishing deans and chapters, it was expressly provided "that all the revenues, rents . . . which before 1st December, 1641, had been, or ought to have been, paid for the maintenance of any grammar school or scholars or for or towards the reparation of any almshouse, or for any other charitable use . . . should be and continue to be paid and allowed as they were." The revenues of S. Peter's School, York, were therefore safeguarded. In Acts and Ordinances 1643 to 1659 is an Act made during the Protectorate of Oliver Cromwell confirming certain Acts (of the Rump Parliament) made between April, 1653, and 3 September, 1654, and among the Acts thus confirmed is "An ordinance touching the Minster of York, and the school called Peter's School."

This Act is not now extant. The authorities of the Restoration carefully destroyed all the Parliament rolls of the Commonwealth period, with the records of the Acts and Ordinances made by them. Consequently those published by Scobell, the Clerk to the Parliament, which are merely a selection from the Public General Acts, are almost the only ones known to us. The Ordinance as to "Peter's School" was in the nature of a Private Act, and so not included in his collection, and seems to have disappeared entirely. There can be no doubt, however, that it was of a remedial nature, and intended to protect the school and its revenues from following those of the dean and chapter. As we shall see, Beverley School went on, and Pocklington School was from 1650 to 1660 at the height of prosperity (East Riding Antiquarian Society's Transactions, 1897, vol. v. p. 91). The appointment, 22 August, 1660 (p. 75), of a new master on the death of Christopher Wallis, late master, shows that Peter's School had been going on.

The rest of the history of S. Peter's School hardly falls within the province of an archæological or antiquarian society. Suffice it here to say that in 1736 the school had been transferred to S. Andrew's Church, which Drake tells us (Eboracum, p. 316) "was united (in 1585) to St Saviour's. The fabric is yet standing, and has had the honour to be converted into a stable at one end. . . . However it now serves a nobler purpose, being made use of for a schoolhouse for the foundation of Philip and Mary, already mentioned to have been anciently in Horsefair." In S. Andrew's it remained for a century, and was then moved in 1833 to new buildings in the Minster Yard, on the site of the old deanery, pulled down only about 1828. In 1844 it was again moved to its present site and buildings in Clifton, a little way beyond the precinct of S. Mary's Abbey. These buildings had been erected for a Proprietary School in 1837. To acquire them it was deemed necessary to procure a fresh licence in mortmain. As a modern licence in mortmain is a rarity, I have thought it would be of historical interest to print it (p. 76).

The school is now governed by a governing body, established by a scheme under the Endowed Schools Acts, approved by the Queen in Council on 18 July, 1898, consisting of representatives of the Archbishop, the Dean and Chapter, the City Council of York, and the County Councils of the three Ridings. Floreat!

BEVERLEY GRAMMAR SCHOOL.

As the foundation of the school of York is coeval, or nearly coeval, with that of York Minster, so no doubt the foundation of Beverley Grammar School is coeval with that of Beverley Minster. That date is discussed at length in the Introduction to my edition of the Beverley Chapter Act Book in Memorials of Beverley Minster, Surtees Society, vol. i. 1898. Its historical origin appears to date from King Athelstan, in the tenth century. But of the pre-Conquest days we have no record like that of Alcuin's poem and letters. At the Conquest Beverley and the minster were spared from ravage. We know that the constitution of the minster under a provost was the same as that at York in the early days of Archbishop Thomas I. We may, from the analogy of York, Waltham, and Warwick, and from the canon law of 832, infer that a schoolmaster was one of the most important officers of the minster. Within half a century after the Conquest we have the Miracles of S. John, written by one Ketell about the year 1100, and therein the tale of "the Schoolmaster in Love" (p. 80c), which takes a schoolmaster (scholasticus) as a matter of course. In his marginal notes to the story, as printed in Historians of the Church of York, Canon Raine translated scholasticus, scholar. The word, however, as has already been stated, is well known as meaning schoolmaster. This story itself shows that to be its meaning. "A certain scholasticus a little after this" (viz. the cure of an Irish apoplectic which the writer had seen) "came to Beverley, wishing to teach school there (scholasticæ disciplinæ studium regere), since the place was full of clerks, and was received by the prelates of the church with whole-hearted zeal. Here as he was both an excellent schoolmaster (literatoria disciplina pollebat) and was ennobled by his character, his manners lowly and kindly pleased all; so did his skill in his art, made up as it was of pleasant exercise and judicious severity. Outside the church he taught a crowded school diligently; inside he exercised the rule of the choir in like spirit; in both no lazy prebendary, but an active official." This does not necessarily mean that he was Song Schoolmaster as well as Grammar Schoolmaster. It was the business, as we have seen at York, of the Schoolmaster to settle the table of lessons for the day, who was to read them, and take the respective parts at the respective services. Our paragon master cast his eyes on a pretty girl and fell head over ears in love. "His heart was torn between fear and shame on the one side, and the abandonment of a raging and unaccustomed passion on the other. The wretched man concealed the blind madness of his desire, which by reason of its very secrecy became more destructive. The rigour of his discipline in school began to slacken; the fervour of his literary studies to cool; and you would think the man was stricken by no light disease, so did pallor and emaciation destroy the young beauty of his face." One morning, after matins, the love-struck master prayed and wept to the Confessor for a long time, and behold he rose cured of his desire, and at once became his former self, to the wonder of all observers. The matter-of-fact way in which the school is mentioned shows that it was no new creation in 1100.

The next mention of the Schoolmaster occurs in the very interesting document of uncertain date, entitled, in the copy in the register of Archbishop Nevill, 1384, the "Order for the canons in the refectory of their portions in the Bedern" (Bederna, a term used at Beverley, Ripon, Howden, and Lincoln for the common house). The canons had certainly ceased to have a common refectory at a very early date, and Warburton, who saw the original parchment roll in the latter part of the eighteenth century, said that the writing was of the date of "Henry II., Richard, or John." It was almost certainly of the twelfth century, and that is the date I have assigned to it. It prescribes the order of sitting in hall, and the bill of fare for the several days in the week, varied by their being or not being feast or fast days. Round the provost sat the canons, in order of seniority, eight in number. They fared not badly, as they had four courses at dinner and two at supper, described by that untranslatable word honesta, which appears to combine the meaning of decent, becoming, appropriate, with that of gentlemanly. Of the four courses the first was salt pork or beef and vegetables, probably in a broth; the second fresh meat, mutton or pork; the third game, or fowl, or goose; the fourth something in the nature of mince-meat. At supper there were two courses of meat boiled and roast, or at least one of meat, the other of cheese, eggs, or fish. On fast days there were also four courses for dinner, one of vegetables, the others of fish; at supper two courses of fish. All the dishes were to be properly seasoned with pepper or cummin or some tasty condiments. On feast days, "as they are more honoured in church so they are to be in hall" with simnel and wastel and various entrées. Simnel and wastel are bread of better sorts. There is no mention of breakfast, but it is perhaps implied that there was one of bread and beer. For when a canon or vicar was bled, bleeding being done periodically, he was served three times a day with bread and beer. At matins, besides bread and beer, he was to have a dish of meat or fish according as it was a flesh or fish day.

Unfortunately we are not told how much bread and beer they were allowed a day, "because no agreement had been come to as to its weight and quantity, except that they were to be better and larger than heretofore."

The only difference as regards food between canons and their vicars was that "the canons shall dine and sup singly and by themselves, the vicars by twos and threes." There being nine vicars, one mess must necessarily have three.

Finally it is said "those for whose service this order is made, are: eight canons, the churchwarden (custos ecclesiæ), and schoolmaster (magistro scholarum), the eight canons' vicars, and the bishop's vicar, whose portion and pay are the business not of the archbishop but of the canons in common, the archbishop's bailiff—in number twenty." After the statement of the total numbers it is added: "Whatever has been said of the corrody of the canons, either in the refectory or out of it, whether during blood-letting or in sickness, the same service in all things is provided for the Churchwarden and the Schoolmaster, except that they do not eat singly." The churchwarden probably represents the person otherwise called sacrist or treasurer, the keeper of the treasures, viz. relics, plate, vestments, and the like; and the schoolmaster the chancellor. These offices at Beverley never became, as in most cathedrals, including York, annexed to canonries and endowed with prebends, but remained, as we see them here, outside the chapter, and their holders took rank not first among the canons but next after them, before the vicars choral or other members and ministers of the church.

From this document there is a long gap in the records of Beverley. On 7 March, 1276 (p. 80m), Archbishop Giffard wrote to his bailiff at Beverley: "Maintain" (exhibe, whence exhibition, still the technical word now for school maintenance) "John Aucher and his two companions attending school (exercentes scolas) at Beverley, from Michaelmas last, with 2s. a week, and their small necessities in fitting style, and pay 36s. for three gowns for their use. It shall be allowed you on the account." The 2s. a week among three, it may be noticed, is again the amount paid for the York choristers, including their teaching, and for Winchester scholars for their commons, 8*d.* a week. Who Aucher and his companions were does not appear. King John in 1205 had sent a similar mandate to one of his officers as to a boy named Geoffrey, attending school at Winchester (History of Winchester College, p. 40). Archbishop William Melton paid "Simon, Schoolmaster of Newark, 2*s.* 5*d.* a week for the expenses of his kinsmen William and Thomas of Melton and their tutor so long as they are there." Probably the disturbed state of the North from the Scotch Wars was the reason for Newark rather than one of the three Yorkshire Minsters being selected for the place of schooling of the Archbishop's relations. Whether the boys thus looked after were relations, or wards of landholding tenants under the system of wardship which then prevailed, there seems to be no means of knowing. Such orders may be taken at all events as evidence that the schools thus favoured were schools of repute.

For the first half of the fourteenth century we have plenty of information about Beverley School, owing to the preservation of the earliest volume of Chapter Acts and Letters, now in the library of the Society of Antiquaries. This volume shows the grammar school in the same position as that of York. The chancellor was the officer primarily responsible for the maintenance of the school. He appointed the master for a term of three years extendible to four. A schoolhouse which the master had to keep in repair was found by the chapter. Whether there was any endowment does not appear. Probably the chancellor had to make some payment, but as there was a contest between the schoolmaster and succentor as to the admission of choristers to the grammar school free, the schoolmaster must have levied fees, and lived chiefly on them.

On 27 October, 1304, on the motion of Mr. Thomas Brompton, "rector of our school (rectore scolarum)," Robert of Dalton, clerk, "who, unmindful of his salvation," had dared to "teach school (scolas regit) in that town," viz. Dalton, "to the prejudice of the liberty of our church," not fearing the sentence of the greater excommunication wholesomely proclaimed four times a year against all who violated the liberties of S. John of Beverley, was directed by the chapter to be warned to give it up in nine days, or he would find himself solemnly excommunicated in Dalton Church. In the following January, in a document headed "For the Schoolmaster's Right," Stephen of Garton, clerk, received a similar warning for keeping an adulterine school (scolas adulterinas) in Kelk. He was to be excommunicated in his own school (in scolis ipsius Stephani).

Next month, March, 1305, Thomas of Brompton was the subject of a strong letter (p. 58) to the Official of the provostry, for having cited him in the provost's court at the instance of Geoffrey of Sancton, clerk, "in a certain personal action touching our school, jurisdiction, and court (forum), thus usurping the chapter's jurisdiction." In a letter to John of Nassington, canon of Beverley, and Official of the court of York, requesting his assistance against the encroachments of the provost's Official on the chapter's jurisdiction, the chapter's Assessor describes Brompton as "Rector of our School, clerk of our choir, wearing the habit, and at proper times set down on the table to read and sing in his turn." Apparently this action had also been brought in the court of York, as another letter follows (p. 86) asking the Official of that court to remit the case of Sancton v. Brompton, which had been wrongly brought before it, to the chapter's court, "if he wishes to obtain the blessed John, their patron, as his intercessor with the Supreme Being."

The cause of this action and counter-action are not stated in these documents, but, from a later letter "testimonial" to the Official of York, it appears that Geoffrey of Sancton was a third infringer of the monopoly of the grammar school-master, and this time in Beverley itself (infra territorium Beverlaci). The letter dated 13 December, 1305, informs the Official how, at the instance of Master Thomas of Brompton, Master of our School (magister scholarum nostrarum, showing that rector and magister were convertible terms), the said Geoffrey, who "in derogation and contempt of the liberties and customs of our church and to the grave prejudice and loss (dispendium) of the said Thomas keeps a school notoriously adulterine" (adulterinas, an unlicensed school), "lawfully suspended and canonically warned to abstain from teaching (regimine) it, refused to do so, and was for his open offence proclaimed to have fallen under the sentence of excommunication providently pronounced four times a year in our church against all in any way infringing or with rash daring violating the liberties, customs, and rights of our church." But "as with hardened mind he despised the keys of the church, when he sought to bring an action against the said Thomas, we refused to hear him, as justice demanded." Therefore they asked the Official "to avoid the said Geoffrey in the consistory court and other places whatsoever, and cause him to be avoided by others, that, while he is shut out from common intercourse, being overwhelmed with shame he may be more easily bent to the grace of humility and the result of reconciliation." A medieval excommunication was thus a "boycott" in its severest form. It was quickly effectual, for on 22 January following, 1306 (p. 88), the chapter directed "Sir Alan of Humbleton, their perpetual vicar," to absolve Geoffrey of Sancton from excommunication for having kept an unlicensed school in his house.

Robert of Dalton, the earlier offender, was not, however, sufficiently impressed, as the chapter on 9 March, 1306, directed two clerks to warn him to put a stop to his school within three days, and if he failed to comply to excommunicate him. He did not comply and was proclaimed excommunicate; but this brought him to reason, as on 8 November, 1306, his absolution from the sentence was ordered.

Meanwhile on 30 September, 1306, a new master was admitted by the chapter's assessor, in the name of the chapter, to Beverley Grammar School (scolas gramaticales). On that day the chancellor of Beverley Minster appeared in chapter, represented only by their Auditor causarum, the judge or assessor of the chapter court, and presented for admission to the school Mr. Roger of Bolton, whom he had collated to the Grammar School on the strength of a testimonial from Cambridge University. These documents are set out in the original (p. 89), and as they are the earliest extant specimens of the full proceedings on the appointment of a schoolmaster and of a schoolmaster's testimonial, they are here given in full.

"Robert of Bitham, chancellor of the church of the blessed John of Beverley to his beloved in Christ, Master Roger of Bolton, health in the Lord. Wishing to reward the merits of your uprightness and discretion with special favour, we confer on you with the love of charity the school of Beverley now vacant and belonging to our collation, to teach (regendas) for three years. In witness whereof our seal is by our will placed to these presents dated at Beverley 2 Kalends of October, A.D. 1306."

The presentation, addressed "to the venerable the chapter" notifies their lordships (dominationi) of the collation, "wherefore do your part further in the matter according to the ancient and approved customs of the church."

The "letter testimonial of behaviour (conversacione) in school" is as follows:—

"To all the sons of holy mother church to whose knowledge or hearing the present letters shall come, Master Richard of Aston, deputy in his absence of the venerable (venerandi) master, Master Stephen of Segrave, chancellor of the University of Cambridge, and the unanimous meeting of masters, health in the love of the Saviour.

"Be it known to your reverend community that Master Roger of Bolton, prosecuting his studies in the University aforesaid, has taught the liberal arts faithfully and usefully, as the effects of his labours are known to show, and has behaved himself well and laudably, and continually improved a life so clothed with morality as to merit the decoration of praiseworthy merit by the testimony of worthy persons.

"Wherefore since favour and grace are due to those whose life is commended by good report, we ask and entreat all of you with all the affection we can, that for the love of God and our prayers, you would deign to listen, as becomes your benevolence, to the same Master Roger, endued as he is with grace, and unmarked so far as is known by any mark of crime, when he comes to you, and favourably to give ear to him in matters which he thinks may profit him, that so you may be worthy of praise in the Lord.

"In witness whereof we have caused these our letters to him to be made patent, strengthened with the support of our common seal; dated at Cambridge in the full congregation of teaching (regent) masters, Saturday after S. Peter's and S. Paul's day, 1306."

The testimonial is somewhat wordy and vague, but the root of the matter, that he had a good character and was successful as a regent master, testified under the University's seal, was there.

On presentation of these documents the auditor decreed that Master Roger should be admitted to the teaching of the said school (ad regimen dictarum scholarum) with all its burdens, who, so admitted, swore his bodily oath touching the holy gospels.

"I, Roger, will be faithful and obedient to the chapter of the blessed John of Beverley and its officers in canonical and lawful mandates. I will faithfully teach the school committed to me, and cause it to be taught by faithful and fit officers, and will faithfully do and observe all and singular things that in me lie by reason of the said school, according to my power, as the laudable and approved customs of the said church and school demand and require. So help me God and God's holy gospels."

"Whereon," says the auditor's entry, "we caused the said Roger to be inducted into bodily possession of the said school by Alan of Humbleton, then master of the work of the church aforesaid, as the custom of our church demands and requires."

The solemnity of the whole business, being practically the same as in the admission of the chancellor himself (pp. 97, 98), sufficiently testifies to the importance of the office of schoolmaster. This is the only instance I have where the proceedings on such an appointment, and particularly the testimonial, are set out at full length. Perhaps the reason of the latter was that the chancellor's character was not above reproach. On 2 April, 1314 (p. 95), Mr. Robert of Bitham, chancellor, was summoned before the chapter for misbehaviour with Jane of Lindsey, and was commanded to abstain from her and all other women under penalty of ten marks. Penance was graciously remitted. At a visitation by the chapter, the only one recorded, held in May the same year, he was diffamed with Matilda of Ripon; and for renewed intercourse with Jane of Lindsey, by whom he had a child, and he was ordered to remove his portress, Letty Howlin, from his house.

An entry of 1 March, 1307, is given (p. 92) to show that one reason why the grammar school was regarded by the authorities of the church as important was that all clerks had to be examined in grammar as well as song. This liability to examination extended to the four clerks, probably two deacons and two sub-deacons, who served in S. Mary's Church, which was legally a chapel belonging to the prebendary of S. Martin's altar in the minster, as well as to the clerks serving in the minster itself.

In March, 1307, Mr. R. Bolton, schoolmaster, went to Mr. Robert of Riplingham, Chancellor of York, master, asking him for assistance in some matter unspecified.

In a convocation of canons of 11 July, 1308, it was decided that the repair of the school (scolarum) is to be done by the schoolmaster, roof as well as walls, but if the school is wholly destroyed in any way its new building is the business of the master of the works. It seems probable that the question arose apropos of the rebuilding of the nave which was then about to be undertaken.

In May, 1312, a new schoolmaster, Mr. Roger of Sutton had a dispute (p. 94) as to how many choristers he was bound to admit to the school gratis. He wished to restrict them to seven, the original number, as it was of canons and of the choristers of York, and to make any beyond pay fees (salarium). The succentor differed. On inquiry from the seniors of the church, and having consideration for the ancient customs of the church and school, the chapter decreed that the number was not to be limited, but that all the choristers should be quit and free (liberi). But the succentor was not to admit boys to wear the habit in choir in fraud of the master.

This is a most important passage in the history of grammar schools, as it shows, not only that the school was not merely, or even primarily, a choristers' school, but also entirely destroys the basis of Dr. Kennedy of Shrewsbury's argument that free schools meant free from ecclesiastical control, or at all events, did not mean and never meant free from tuition fees, because "of school-keeping as a gainful profession we find no trace in the Middle Ages." Yet here, in or about one town, a great town as the times went, but still not one of the greatest, we find no less than three rival schools to the grammar school set up, and put down at the instance of the authorised grammar schoolmaster. The natural inference is that even in 1304 school-keeping was a gainful profession, since three men were anxious to practise it and the fourth went to law in defence of his monopoly. Why should they or he excite themselves if there were no profits to be made? The inference is confirmed by our finding that the master exacted fees even from the choristers; and that the chapter declared that the choristers were to be free scholars (liberi), using the very word which, Dr. Kennedy asserted, was never used to mean free of payment.

On January 7, 1313, we have an order as to the removal of S. Nicholas' service, performed by the schoolmaster of Beverley on his day, 6 December, to the altar of S. Blaise pending the rebuilding of the new work, the nave. The Boy Bishop was therefore in vogue at Beverley as in other great churches.

Next year, among other misdemeanours of the chancellor already mentioned, he was accused (p. 314) of breaking the ancient custom of the church by making the schoolmaster's appointment perpetual "until he should receive other promotion." The chancellor was thus anticipating what was done by the chapter at York in 1368.

On 25 July, 1320, a new chancellor, Robert of Laneham, appointed Mr. Geoffrey of Whitby, clerk, nearly in the same form as the appointment of Mr. Roger of Bolton, "to hold for three years." In fact he held it for fifteen years, as the next appointment was 13 August, 1335 (p. 99), when Henry Bassett, chancellor, writing at Lincoln, informs the chapter that he had conferred the teaching of the grammar school (regimen scholarum gramaticalium) vacant by the death of Geoffrey of Whitby, on Mr. William of Bredon of Beverley.

One of the latest entries in the Chapter Act Book in the year 1338 (p. 100) contains a very curious and interesting peep into the old customs of the school. It is headed "of gloves to be given to the ministers of the church," and contains the decision of the chapter's assessor in a case which had been heard before him "as to the gift and livery of suitable gloves by bachelors newly made in the grammar school of the church." The decision is that they are bound to give them to certain officers of the church, eight pairs in all, namely one pair each to the chapter clerk and the assessor, to the chapter crier (praconi), to the chamberlain's clerk, to the clerk of our Lady's Altar, to the clerk who makes the service list (tabulam), and to three sextons. The establishment of a custom for such extensive and expensive tips as these goes strongly to show that the school was not confined to mere choristers or poor clerics, but was attended by the same classes that now send their sons to grammar and public schools. The power of conferring degrees in grammar is noteworthy; and points to considerable prestige on the part of the school.

After 1348 there are unhappily no more Chapter Act Books, and, with the exception of a couple of Fabric Rolls, no more minster records. There is, however, in the second earliest extant account-roll of the borough of Beverley for 1366-7, a casual mention of the schoolmaster (magistro scholarum) in a list of those assessed for paving the town. His name is not given. He paid 4s., being more than any other payment recorded except two, one of 10s. and the other of 4s. The majority of payments were 1s. or under. After an interval of nearly eighty years we find another schoolmaster mentioned, Mr. William Hardynges, or, as he is otherwise called with divers varieties of spelling, Harding. We trace him in the Town Minute Book from 25 April, 1436, to 23 August, 1456. He was a person of importance in the town; but it is only because of the chance attachment of the title to him on one or two occasions that we know that he was the schoolmaster. He first appears in 1436 acting as an assessor or collector of assessments for finding archers and armed men to join an expedition against Scotland. Twelve archers was Beverley's contribution, the twelve constabularies into which the town was divided finding one each. One of these was called "the provost's fee" or property, distinguished as such from the archbishop's fee, which comprised the bulk of the town, and the chapter fee, which comprised the chapter's and prebendaries' lands near the minster, chiefly south and north of it. Of this fee Harding was chief of a group of seven, who took the "bill" or list of contributions. He was himself entered as a contributor in Keldgate; but the amount of the contributions is not stated. The fact that the schoolmaster thus lived on the provost's fee was no doubt the circumstance which induced the provost's Official to attempt to exercise jurisdiction over him in 1305. The schoolmaster's house was in Keldgate until the corporation sold it a few years ago. It is now in the occupation of Mr. Green. Its present appearance is that of a brick house of the last century, but its basement contains portions of stone walls of great antiquity. It is most probable that the Schoolmaster always lived there before 1548.

In 1440 "Mr. Hardynges, schoolmaster" got into trouble with his fellow burgesses for breach of a Town order against putting milch cows in the town pasture of Fegang (now called Figham) whereby he incurred a penalty of 20s. The practice was, if an offender put down the full penalty before the governing body, the twelve keepers or governors, to return the money to him except a small fine, usually 4*d.*, with an injunction not to do it again. Harding, however, proved recalcitrant, refused to put down 20s., and was thereupon discharged of his burgess-ship; the ultimate penalty for disobedience to the governors. This was on 31 September. After some six months, on 17 February next, he was readmitted on the petition of the lord provost; of Mr. William Duffeld, whom we have already met at York, and who was a canon of Beverley; of the archbishop's auditor; and of John Portington, and other venerable persons. Portington was a governor of the town, and the governors like the chapter were often called venerable. On putting down his 20s. and making his submission the money was given back to Harding on condition of not doing it again.

He continued to take a prominent part in the town affairs. On 26 March, 1446, he was elected, and on S. Mark's day, 25 April, when the municipal year began, was duly sworn, one of the twelve governors. In 1446, 1448, and 1456 he was again elected one of the twelve governors or keepers of the community of the town of Beverley, and on the last occasion was one of the three who kept the keys of the town chest. In 1450 (p. 107-8) he was one of seventeen elected, but not one of the twelve sworn. In 1447, with the governors and a large number of burgesses, he, described by his official title, rode with two horses (most of them rode unaccompanied on one horse) to "Routhespittel" to meet King Henry VI. on his coming to Beverley, and as one of two stewards of the great guild of S. John of Beverley with the master advanced £10 towards the present of £85 given to the king. The speech of Roger Rolleston in receiving the king on this occasion is recorded: "Most graciouse cristen Prince, our Soveraynge lord, ye be welkom til your pepul and toun of Beverley." In 1449, and again on his last appearance in 1456, Harding was one of the more substantial inhabitants assessed in groups of twelve or thirteen to find each one of the six men-at-arms (homines armatos), or armed men on horseback, for the Scotch wars.

With this last notice the Grammar School and its master disappear from view until after the Reformation. This is not, we may be sure, because it ceased to exist, but because there are no more Chapter Act Books, or Chapter Accounts, or Town Minute Books, or the like, in which he could or might appear. In the sister collegiate church of Southwell in Nottinghamshire, the fourth of the minsters of the Archbishop of York, where a fifteenth-century Chapter Act Book survives, there are several references to the grammar school, carrying it up to the Reformation.

The Song School or precentor's school only occurs in a quite casual way in the earliest extant Fabric Roll, for 1423-4. In the account of the bailiff of Bentley, a manor appropriated to the fabric, under the heading of "sale of faggots with wood," is a marginal note "memorandum of one oak felled for the precentor's school given to the same." The Latin original has "pro scola cantoris datis eisdem." The plural form eisdem is curious; it marks the tendency to think of a school in the plural, though in fact the word scola is here put in the singular. It was just at this time that the change took place, the plural form being dropped, and the more correct singular taking its place. In the account roll of the Receiver of the fabric preserved in the British Museum (Add. Ch., 27324) printed by Poulson in his Beverlac, p. 638, occurs the entry: "Stipend of George Morsell, Master of the Choristers, chaplain (conductitius) of the Mass of our Lady and the name of Jesus, 46s. 8d." Poulson has translated conductitius, a conduct or hired chaplain, as "conductor," but, as pointed out in my English Schools at the Reformation (p. 23), it is a well-known term, appearing in the statutes of Winchester College in 1400, and elsewhere, for a priest who had not a freehold in his office, and is in use to this day for a chaplain of Eton College.

These two mentions are all that I have been able to find of the Song School. They are sufficient to show that it was not the same as the Grammar School.

At Beverley, unfortunately, there are no town accounts or minute books for the whole of the reign of Edward VI. Poulson (Beverlac, 1829, p. 298 n.) says, "There is a traditionary account of certain Goths, who were members of the corporation body, having burnt many bundles of these interesting accounts; or used them, in their wisdom, for the covers of their books." But it is rather curious that it is only for the reigns of Edward VI. and Mary that there are absolutely no accounts, while there are plenty for the reigns of Henry IV. to Henry VIII., and from Elizabeth downwards. Poulson says of the school (p. 452): "It is singular that the burgesses, who must have foreseen the downfall, were not prepared to petition for some of the collegiate buildings, for the endowment and continuance of the school, as was the case in many places in the reign of Edward VI. The presumption therefore is that the twelve Governors paid one of the clergy, who had a home to seek, for the instruction of their sons, particularly as two fellowships were still open to them. . . . The first entries that occur in the rolls of accounts of the corporation which have any reference to the subject are in the year from Michaelmas 1605-6, 3rd James I." He then gives the entries, printed here (p. 120), misreading Cowper into Gowe.

It now appears that these statements are ill-founded. The burgesses of Beverley did in 1552 petition the Crown (p. 113) for the school. They asked for the grant of the Fabric lands, worth £60 a year, for the support of the minster, and at the same time for a free grammar school. As regards the latter they pointed out that "Beverley is a market towne and the greatest within all East Riding of your Majesty's County of York, having a great number of youths within the same, and 5,000 persons and above, whereof some of them be apt and meet to be brought up in learning, which are not, for so much as there is neither grammar school or any other school, as yet founded, wherewith they might be brought up in any virtuous study." They therefore asked that "there may be erected within the said town, of your most princely foundation, one free grammar school," or "fre gramer schole" as it is spelt, "to the further encrease of such youthe as there remayneth to this present day and in time to come, so shall the same youth be educated and taught of all things to serve God, to live in due obedience and fear of your highness, their sovereign lord and king, and they with the whole inhabitants of the said town to pray," etc. The Report of the Chancellor of the Court of Augmentations to the Council as to the Fabric Fund is preserved (p. 115), and the grant of the lands, except the Manor of Bentley, already granted away to the Duke of Northumberland, for which some chantry lands were substituted, was made.

What happened about the school does not appear. But in an Account Roll of the Town Governors for 1562-3 is an entry (p. 116) of "12*d.* paid to the Schoolmaster for teaching an impoverished (paupertato) boy." From 1566 to 1572 (p. 117) are successive entries of payments made to the schoolmaster for his players. As it is put in 1567: "To the Schoolmaster his players 17*s.* Item paid to the waits for playing when the Schoolmaster's players played 3*s.* 4*d.*" In 1570 there appears 10*s.* given as "reward to the Schoolmaster players upon the potation day before 'fastnes evin,'" i.e. Shrove Tuesday. In 1571 there is a payment of "4*d.* for braggs etc. to the School house." In 1572 (p. 118) the Governors agreed to appoint "one master for to teach petties in this borough; and the Grammar Schoolmaster to be no more charged with teaching petties." The master was to have £2 13*s.* 4*d.* In 1575 there is accounted for under the heading of "Fees and Wages" a payment to the Master of the Grammar School. In 1575 it was £21, "paid to Mr. Richardson, clark, master of the grammar 'skoole' for one whole year's wages." In the next extant account, 1602-3, the amount is reduced (p. 119) to £10 paid to Mr. Southeren, Southern, or Sotheran; while a William Jackson, who is paid £2 13*s.* 4*d.*, was probably the teacher of the petties. In 1601 it had been agreed that Mr. Sotheran should have "a chamber room" for teaching his scholars in the vicar's chambers or thereabouts, "until the school house be repaired."

These entries point unmistakably to the continuance of the school in some form. In the absence of a Chantry Certificate or Continuance Order, it must nevertheless be presumed that, as at Southwell, such an order was made, and that the Schoolmaster was continued with a stipend of the amount he previously received, viz. £2. This is not inconsistent with the statement of the burgesses' petition that no Grammar School had been founded, because the Continuance Order was not a foundation, and left the Schoolmaster with perhaps, as in the case of Ripon and Southwell, £2 a year.

The entries in Elizabeth's reign before 1575 prove two things: that there was a Grammar School going on, and that, though the school building was in some way under them, the Schoolmaster was not paid by the corporation. It must therefore be inferred, I think, that the petition to Edward VI. for the independent erection of a free grammar school had failed.

What change, if any, had taken place which resulted in the town taking upon themselves the payment of the master in 1575, I do not know. In 1573 Beverley acquired under a charter of 24 July from Elizabeth a mayor, and being formerly a corporation by prescription, then became incorporated by charter under the name of the Mayor, Governors, and Burgesses of Beverley. But there was no additional revenue derived therefrom.

After the gap in the accounts from 1575 to 1602-3, we find University Exhibitions as well as the Grammar School being maintained by the town. The first mention of these is 40s. a year to Robert Metcalfe towards his maintenance at Cambridge, which was continued to 1606. He showed his gratitude for the help thus received by founding in 1652 an exhibition of £6 13s. 4d. a year to help others in like case, besides giving £10 a year to the grammar schoolmaster. I have not printed his will because it is very long, and a full account of it is given in the official report of the Commissioners of Inquiry concerning Charities.

Ralph Cowper's son Robert also received an exhibition, but only of £1 10s. a year.

Other exhibitioners were—

pp. 127, 129. Symon, son of William Fox, 1608-9—Michaelmas, 1612.

pp. 129-30. Thomas Thornaby, 14 November, 1612—1614.

In 1606-7 the building of a new school began, which was no doubt the school a drawing of which is given in Poulson's Beverlac (p. 452). The building and furnishing took four years (pp. 121-7). The "digging of stones and casting sand" for it began on 1 September, 1606 (p. 122), and "14 double casements with hasps for the schoolhouse windows" were made or paid for, it is not clear which, on 4 April, 1610. The total cost of the building was £155 14s. 3d. It was mainly of brick, of which some 23,000 seem to have been used. Ten thousand bricks were bought on 26 September from Thomas Heath of Heddon at a cost of £6 5s., or at the rate of 12s. 6d. a thousand, while another 5,000 from the same person in November, 1607, were at the rate of 13s. a thousand. Another 3,000 were bought of William Jackson at 13s. 4d. in November and December, 1607. The item of 9s. to John Thorneton for "wall tyle" must also be for bricks, but for what quantity, we are left in the dark. The price of bricks had thus risen nearly four times since the building of the North Bar two centuries before, 1409-10, when the price varied from 3s. 0 $\frac{3}{4}$ d. a thousand to 3s. 9 $\frac{1}{4}$ d. (East Riding Antiquarian Society's Transactions, 1896, pp. 32-48). Freestone for the windows came from Acklome viâ Hull, and there was 45 feet of it at a cost of 22s., with another 6s. worth afterwards, and 25 feet of unwrought stone at 14s. 6d. "Thack" i.e. thatch or roof-tiles bought from William Harpham of Hull, 6 June, 1608, cost 54s. 2d., while 1,000 "tyle" on 11 July, 1607, cost £3 6s. 8d. This price was more than six times that of the "thak tiles" used on the North Bar in 1409, which cost only 10s. a thousand. Building the porch was contracted for separately at £10.

A change of masters from Mr. Blackwood to Mr. Petty took place while the school was building in 1608. Mr. Petty lived in a chamber somewhere "in the minster garth" (p. 123), not like the mediæval and the modern masters in Keldgate. The town provided books, at least books of reference for the school; £1 19s. 10d. was spent on them in 1608-9. "A dictionary for the scholars" cost 3s. 4d., Rider's Dictionary (John Rider, Bishop of Killaloe, c. 1600), 30s.; and "another book bought at Cross Fair, and bringing one from Cambridge" cost 6s. 6d. In August, 1611, the master was paid 18s. 10d. for "a book called Silburgius, and for chains for other two books in the school." Another book unnamed, bought in 1612, cost 18s., and in 1613 Erasmus's Adages cost 19s.

In 1614 Mr. Petty had given place to Mr. Garthwaite as schoolmaster. No less than £6 and 20d. was paid for the expenses of the candidates "coming down." The new master promptly caused an expenditure of 31s. for new books. His salary was also raised to £12 6s. 8d. In the next accounts, 1625-6, a new master, Mr. Clarke, appears with a salary of £12 a year. In 1630 a new usher, Mr. Richard Barrett, is appointed in place of Mr. Sherewood, who was afterwards head master, to have yearly for his fee £6 13s. 4d. The town cook received £4 a year. In 1644-5 Mr. Cox was master, receiving £13 6s. 8d., and the usher, Mr. Jenkinson, £6 13s. 4d. The civil war was already in progress. On 2 October, 1645, Mr. Cocks, or Cox, was ordered to be displaced, and Mr. Robert Steele, schoolmaster at the neighbouring town of Cottingham, to be admitted, at a salary of £20 a year. But in the February following Mr. Cox was still there, to act both as schoolmaster and usher at his whole salary. This looks as if he were being dismissed for incompetence rather than for politics. Mr. Steele was in office by 30 April, when he was sworn a burgess (p 133), and Thomas Segswicke was appointed to the combined office of usher and assistant or "reader" in the minster at £16 a year. In the last quarter of 1647 Mr. Steele's salary was raised to £26 13s. 4d. Either schoolmasters were becoming scarce, or the Parliamentarians prized them more highly. In July, 1649, the mastership was again vacant, Mr. Nesse being sent to "whether he will accept of the place for being the head schoolmaster of the Free School." On 27 August he was admitted at a salary of 40 marks, £26 13s. 4d., the same as the last master, but to find his own usher.

On 8 April, 1651, the following books were delivered into the school: Erasmus's 'Adages, Poetical Dictionary, Jewish Antiquities, Scapula's Lexicon, Rider's Dictionary. On 2 February, 1652, a new schoolmaster, Mr. Thomas Poley (not Paley, as Poulson calls him) was elected to be "chief or head Schoolmaster," but on 11 October he gave place to Mr. Francis Sherwood. On 25 November, 1658, a solemn decision is recorded, with the votes for and against, on the question whether "Mr. Sherwood shall be admitted to the head schoolmastership of the Free School of this town, to have the same stipend as formerly he had." The meaning of this apparently was that he had accepted the duty also of afternoon preacher at the minster at £16 a year, as on 4 July he was to continue in it until another should supply his place. He was confirmed in his old salary as master by sixteen votes to six. On 19 January, 1661, he was formally elected assistant at the minster vice Mr. John Womros—a queer name—lately deceased. He presumably held office till 1668, when on 21 September Mr. John Forge, "Master of the Free School," was sworn a burgess. In 1674 Mr. Joseph Lambert, assistant at the minster, was elected Master, and made to resign his assistantship, and "not to attempt of any other employment in the church during his being schoolmaster." The salary was raised to £30; £20 from the town and £10 from Dr. Metcalfe's foundation. Apparently the usher was usually assistant, as in March, 1703, it was ordered "that the usher of the grammar school and the assistant curate's place at the minster, being distinct places, and for that this chamber is of opinion that they cannot both be in one person, without prejudice to the school, therefore it is further ordered that the same places do remain and continue two distinct places."

Until the Municipal Reform Act of 1835, the Grammar School continued to flourish under the management and partly at the expense of the Corporation of Beverley aided by a voluntary but customary levy on the members for the borough. The old school in the Minster Garth has now disappeared, and the old schoolmaster's house in Keldgate has been sold. But under a scheme of 18 February, 1890, a Beverley Grammar School is still to be found, as there was 800 years ago and more, in the ancient capital of the East Riding.

RIPON GRAMMAR SCHOOL.

We now pass to Ripon, where the collegiate church of S. Wilfrid dates from the days of Athelstan, and where S. Wilfrid's crypt, under the existing minster, witnesses that there was a church in the days of Wilfrid himself, Bishop of Ripon and of York. That the Grammar School there existed before and at the Conquest it would be absurd to doubt.

But the extant history of Ripon School is neither so early nor so full as that of York or Beverley. The earliest reference to the Schoolmaster there does not perhaps present him in the most august position. It is a casual mention on the Plea Roll of 22 Edward III., for reference to which I am indebted to that keen Yorkshire antiquary, Mr. W. P. Baildon, and shows him under indictment for felony. In Michaelmas term, 1348, the Sheriff of Yorkshire was ordered, "as he had been many times before," to take Thomas of Bethwesh of Bradfield, and 137 other persons, men and women, priests, clerks, and laymen, including "Richard, the chamberlain, clerk (clerc), formerly master of the schoolhouse (scolehou) of Ripon." He was to bring them up before the king at Martinmas "to answer for divers felonies committed, as it is said, in the county aforesaid, of which they had been indicted before the keepers of the king's peace." They came not, and the sheriff returned that they could not be found. So he was ordered to cause them to be driven from county to county till the women, seven in number, were made waifs, and the men outlawed, and to produce their bodies on the morrow of S. John the Baptist. Whether any further proceedings were taken, or what it was all about, I have not been able to ascertain. From the number concerned it would seem that the felonies charged were in connection with some sort of riot or rising. The incident need not reflect great discredit on the Ripon Schoolmaster.

The description of Richard Chamberlain as master of the schoolhouse and not of the school is a curious coincidence, for nearly all that is known of Ripon School is in connection with the schoolhouse. This is because at Ripon our knowledge of the school is chiefly derived not from histories or Act Books, but from Account Rolls. These have been published by Dr. Fowler for the Surtees Society, Nos. 74, 78, 81, and from his book they are taken. By the kindness of the Dean I have been enabled to go through the originals and verify the prints. The divergences between them are not many.

The earliest document is the Fabric Roll, or account of the Keepers of the Fabric, for 1354-5, and contains an entry "for decrease of rent of a tenement once in the tenure of the Schoolmaster (magister scholarum), which used to return 10s. and is now let to Sir John Hubert, chaplain, for 2s. 1d." From this there was an outgoing "to the lord of Nunwick," the canon and prebendary of that name, of 6d. There was also paid 9d. to the vicars (choral) of the church for the obit of Agnes Scriven, as appears in the Obits Register, written in the following century, "from the house above the schoolhouse (scol hows)." In the next Fabric Roll, 1379-80 (p. 142), we find "6s. for rent of a messuage in Annesgate in the tenure of Master Thomas, skulemayster." Among the outgoing is the 6d. to the Lord of Nunwick "for a messuage near the churchyard formerly in the tenure of Mr. Richard, Rector of the Grammar School (rectoris scholarum gramaticalium)," and this in the Fabric Roll of 1391-2 is described as "a messuage lying near the cemetery on the south side of the same," while in the next year's roll (p. 145) it is further described as lying in Anns-gate. As late as 1396-7 this house is still said to have been "late in the tenure of Master Richard of the Grammar School," when it was let for 6s. 8d.

One wonders whether the Master Richard in question was the ex-schoolmaster who was indicted for felony, and whether the house was vacant in 1354 on that account. At all events his place had been supplied in 1380 by another master named Thomas.

The house thus let in the street variously called Annsgate, Annusgate, Annisgate, and Annotisgate, the modern name of which is Agnesgate, is stated in the account for 1392-3 to have been given to the fabric by Agnes Scriven. It was rebuilt in that year and the following, during which no rent was paid, and it was re-let for 6s. 8d. in 1396-7. John Memersmyth (p. 148) was the tenant in 1399-1400. But whether he was the Grammar Schoolmaster seems doubtful. In that year a payment is recorded of "8d. for a lock and 2 keys for the house in which the Grammar Master lives," but this was probably not the same house. The Scriven house seems to have been let in 1503-4 to Elizabeth Roclyff (p. 155).

In 1416-7 a new item appears of a somewhat surprising character. Five shillings is entered as received for rent of "the school-house (domo scholarum) situate under three chambers in the churchyard by Annsgate." This occurs again 1418-9. Next year there is "a decrease in rent of one messuage in Annsgate, viz. the Scho[l]hows, 1s.," while in 1424-5 there is a decrease of rent of "5s. from the schoolhouse for default of tenants;" and again next year "because the master had gone out of town, and could not be distrained upon."

For 1439-40 we have the first of the extant accounts of the Chamberlain of the minster. A Chamberlain was commonly a treasurer, as the Chamberlain of the Exchequer, and the Chamberlain of the City of London. He paid "distributions"—a more or less technical term in collegiate churches for the payments made to their members for attendance at services—"to the chaplain of the altar of the Blessed Mary, and to the master of Ripon Grammar School" at the rate of a shilling each for the year, 6d. each at Easter and Christmas, with another "penny for their masses," i.e. their offerings or oblations at the Easter communion; and 2d. for wearing their copes, i.e. singing in choir, and for their commons (communibus) on the three feasts of S. Wilfrid, Christmas, and Easter. Payments of the same amount were made to the vicars choral. This entry is repeated in subsequent rolls; but in 1447-8 there was no master, as after the payments to the "chaplain of the chantry of Blessed Mary in the chapel in Ripon Church" it is added, "and if there is a Grammar Schoolmaster at Ripon he shall have in form aforesaid and in like manner as the chaplain of the chantry aforesaid, 12*d.* a year, by custom."

In the Fabric Roll for the two years 1453-5 (p. 153) we find, for the first time, the word grammar school used in the singular. Of the three chambers over the Grammar School (scolam gramaticalem) only one was let, and there was a decrease of rent for the Grammar School itself of 10*s.* "because the master had not paid anything for the aforesaid two years."

In 1454, however, there was a master, as in the book wrongly called a Chapter Act Book, which means a minute book of chapter meetings, and which was in fact the record of the proceedings in the chapter court, we find a "Master of the Grammar School (de scola gramaticali)," unnamed, acting as proctor to cite Helen Poureht in a will case.

In 1458 a master of the Grammar School appears again in the chapter court in a somewhat ambiguous position. The ecclesiastical courts were practically worked as, among other things, small debt courts. When some one had undertaken to pay a specific sum on a definite day, and failed to pay, the ecclesiastical courts assumed jurisdiction by allowing the defaulter, if resident in their district, to be summoned before them for the sin of breach of faith (fidei læsionem). Thus "at a chapter held 20 May, 1458, Katharine Walker of Kirkgate, widow, was summoned at the instance of John Crooser, dyer, for breach of faith. She appeared "by Henry Singylton, Master of the Grammar School (magistrum scolæ gramaticalis), her proctor lawfully instructed and constituted by act, and admits the plea, viz. that she owes the said John 13*s.* in all with costs; and the said Henry intervened as the true debtor of the said sum, and was sworn on the holy Gospels to pay the same by equal instalments on Midsummer Day and 1 August then next. And for his breach of faith he submitted himself openly." An interlineation in the record adds "and he did it," i.e. he paid at the time appointed. Whether he was really the principal debtor, having borrowed money through Mrs. Walker, or whether in pursuit of his business as proctor he accommodated his client by making himself personally liable, is not quite clear.

There was nothing particularly remarkable in the Schoolmaster thus acting as proctor. Every clerk, especially one who had been to the university, was in those days a bit of a lawyer. Chancellor Cardinal Wolsey himself began life as head master of Magdalen College School at Oxford. The chapter court usually sat only once a week, on Saturdays, and the court itself was held (as we learn from the Fabric Roll of 1512-3, p. 156) in one of the chambers above the schoolhouse.

Henry Singleton appears twice more in a quasi-legal capacity. On Trinity Sunday, 1464, described as "Henry Syngelton, rector of the school (rectore scholarum)," he witnessed the will of Thomas Esby, vicar (choral) of the prebend of Nunwick, signing next after "Sir W. Sawl, vicar (choral):" and on 12 December, 1467, he witnessed the will of John Byrtby, chantry priest of S. Andrew's chantry; the witnesses running, "Ralph Park, gentleman, Thomas Plumber, and William Raner, chaplains, Henry Singelton, Schoolmaster (magistro scholarum)," and three others, described as chaplains.

At Ripon, as at York and Beverley, the title of Rector and Master were clearly identical and interchangeable. Rector is still a common title for schoolmaster in Scotland to this day, and at Berwick the master of the Corporation Academy is so called.

The entries are also useful as showing the identity in meaning between the singular and the plural term for a single school. In 1454 the singular, in 1464 and 1467 the plural is used. The change from plural to singular, coincident with the greater increase of classical accuracy and the beginnings of Greek learning, is noticeable. In the next Chamberlain's Roll, 1475-6, the singular is again used in the title of the Grammar Schoolmaster (scolæ gramaticalis), who received his distributions as usual. As regards both the school and the schoolmaster the singular is thenceforth alone used at Ripon, as far as our knowledge extends.

In the later Fabric Rolls there does not appear to be any payment of rent for the schoolhouse, but a rent of 8*d.* is paid by various persons "for the rent of a small garden lying before the Grammar School door" (p. 155-6-7), and the rents of the chambers over it which were re-roofed at an expense of 9*s.* 8½*d.* in 1453-5 (p. 153) are duly recorded. The Grammar Schoolmaster also duly received his shilling a year for his distributions at Easter in all the extant Chamberlain's Rolls, 1502-3, 1511-2, 1525-6, and 1540-1, but in 1520-1 there is no mention of him, the office probably being vacant.

Lastly, in the certificate made by Henry VIII.'s commissioners for the purposes of the Act for the dissolution of colleges and chantries passed in 1545, we find (p. 157) "One Scolemaster of Gramer" entered as one of the staff of the church with the three deacons, three sub-deacons, six choristers, six triblers (thuribularii, or incense bearers), and one organ-player. His pay was £2, which, like the £5 10s. received by the deacons between them, was "paid yearly forth of the common of the said church," i.e. the common fund, belonging to the chapter as a whole, distinct from the individual prebends belonging to the separate canons. This was the amount which was paid also at the fourth of the York Minsters, Southwell (Visitations and Memorials of Southwell Minster, Camden Society, 1891, pp. xlii., lxvi.). There it had been the practice for at least half a century (loc. cit. p. 177, 52, 77) to supplement this payment, which in process of time had become inadequate, by conferring one of the chantries in the church on the Schoolmaster. There is every reason to believe that the same practice had prevailed at Ripon, as among the chantry priests (p. 164) holding the chantry of the Holy Trinity "above the Quer (choir)," founded in 1345, was "Edmunde Browne, clerke," and he was, as will be seen, at this time Schoolmaster. In 1544, described as Mr. Edmund Brown, he was proctor or proxy at a chapter for Arthur Low, prebendary of Nunwick (Ripon Chapter Acts, p. 348).

Why, in the face of the facts above recited, Mr. H. M. Bower, in his Introduction to the Foundation Charter of 1555 (Ripon, William Harrison, 1897), questioned my statement made in English Schools at the Reformation, p. 111-12, that Ripon Collegiate Church kept a public grammar school before the dissolution, it is hard to conceive.

He says "it seems likely enough that at Ripon the teaching of grammar, said to have been one amongst several duties of the precentor in the thirteenth century, was somewhat later divided from the teaching of music and allotted to a special grammar schoolmaster, as the latter was a sub-chanter," and refers to Dr. Fowler's Memorials of Ripon, III., xv., with the remark that "the authority of Mr. Fowler, who in that work exhibited a very special study of the Ripon church's history, should be accepted on a point of this sort, until further discovery, or else general considerations of great force, shows his opinion wrong." It must be remembered that the subject of grammar schools was not specially present to Dr. Fowler. There is no difficulty both from general considerations and on the particular case in showing him to have been wrong. The passage referred to is: "The precentor, namely the prebendary of Stanwick, was rector chori by Archbishop Gray's appointment in 1230 (II., 2). His duty was to organize, arrange, and conduct the music, keep order in choir, and instruct the boys in music and grammar. In later times he had under him a sub-chanter, and a master of the grammar-school." So far as the words italicized are concerned there is not a vestige of evidence to support them. The document referred to, an ordination of the prebend of Stanwick, 13 November, 1230, merely says that "who ever shall be canon of that prebend shall be rector chori and perpetually resident there." Not a word is said as to the precentor's duties, which Dr. Fowler has derived from other sources, perfectly correctly as far as regards his duties to the choir and the music; but not as regards the grammar teaching and master. Enough has been said about the chancellor and precentor at York and Beverley to show that the precentor, while having everything to do with music and musical instruction, had nothing to do with grammar. Dr. Fowler fell into error, when he said (p. x. of the volume already cited), "Southwell had its chancellor and treasurer but no precentor; Beverley its provost, chancellor, and precentor, but no treasurer." The error has been conclusively shown by the Camden Society book on Southwell Minster, and the Surtees Society book on Beverley Minster, in which the precentor of the one and the treasurer of the other plainly appear. I am not at all sure that he is right when he says there was no chancellor at Ripon. The fact cited by him that payments were made for advocates and proctors is not the smallest proof that there was no chancellor. Similar payments were made by the chapter and by the town council of Beverley, though the one had not only its chancellor but its chapter clerk and legal assessor and the other its town clerk. The payments were retaining fees for standing legal advisers in the court of York. Just as the prebendary of Stanwick was ex-officio precentor, and the prebendary of Monkton ex-officio treasurer, so I strongly suspect that the prebendary of Nunwick was ex-officio chancellor.

However that may be, it is not "a difficult question" how far the Grammar School was then separated or differentiated from the Song School. They were absolutely separate.

In 1391-2, in the third of the extant Fabric Rolls, we first meet with the Song School. Rents are accounted for (p. 144) amounting to 13s. 6d. for certain chambers in the wood house (astelaria); which subsequent accounts, e.g. that for 1396-7 (p. 147), show to have been six in number. Among the "falls of rent" is returned "2s. for fall of rent of a chamber in the tenure of John Segerstane, because he holds it by loan of the canons for his school (scolis suis).^s" The two next years the fall of rent is put at 1s. 6d.; and in the latter year it is said to be "lent him for his school at the will of the canons." Another of the chambers was also let for nothing to "the grith-priest," the priest whose duty it was apparently to look after the "grith-men" or sanctuary-men who had taken refuge in the sanctuary of Ripon. These chambers appear as let at various amounts in subsequent Fabric Rolls. In 1503 we find the entry of "10s. 4*d.* rent for divers parcels," which include "2 messuages in Asterlare now restored (reditis) into 2 song chambers;" while in 1512-3 these are called "2 messuages in Ayserleyn now in two chambers over the Song School, one in the tenure of William Watson, and the other of John Watson" at 2*s.* a year each. Now John Watson appears in the Chamberlain's Roll of the year before as receiving payment of 3*s.* 4*d.* for playing upon the organs (i.e. organ, as an organ was spoken of as "a pair of organs"), and also of "10*s.* for the Lady Mass with singing in the chapel of the church and keeping the organs." In the Chantry Certificate (p. 159) these two payments are lumped together, and the pay of the organist is put at 13*s.* 4*d.*; a sum which was the customary sum payable very generally to an organist, e.g. Southwell and Beverley. Here then is the Song School specifically mentioned, and in an entirely different place from the Grammar School. They could not therefore be the same. In point of fact in a considerable place like Ripon, and in a large establishment such as was Ripon Collegiate Church, they could never have been the same. In every collegiate church that I have ever come across, from York Minster and Winchester College to Howden and Thornton, the two schools and masters were entirely distinct. I do not mean to say that the scholars of the Grammar School would never resort to the Song School to learn music, or the choristers of the Song School to the Grammar School to learn grammar. On the contrary, it is clear that they would and did. But the schools were absolutely differentiated in historical times, performing distinct functions under separate masters, and subject to the control of different officers.

The Song School ceased with the abolition of the collegiate church and the pensioning off of the prebendary of Stanwick, the precentor. This took place, not, as Mr. Bower supposes, by "a confiscation of 1546" under Henry VIII., but in 1548 under Edward VI. Mr. Bower was no doubt misled by the Chantry Certificate, printed by Dr. Fowler (Memorials of Ripon, III., 8 seq.), and by Mr. W. H. Page (Yorkshire Chantry Surveys, II., 345 seq.). That certificate was taken under the Chantries Act of Henry VIII., passed in 154 $\frac{5}{6}$; the commission for taking it issuing 14 Feb., 154 $\frac{5}{6}$.

(English Schools at the Reformation, p. 63). But Ripon College was not confiscated under that Act. The Act was permissive only, and Henry VIII. did not take advantage of the permission. The Chantries Act of Edward VI., passed in his first year, 1547, was not permissive but peremptory. It abolished all colleges except cathedrals and University colleges, and gave their revenues to the Crown from Easter, 1548. Accordingly the accounts of the ministers of the Crown (Memorials of Ripon, III., 33 seq.) account for the possessions of the minster to the Crown for a year and a half ending Michaelmas, 1549. Ripon having become a manor of the Duchy of Lancaster, the collegiate church became in accordance with the Act a part of the Duchy, and not of the general revenues of the Crown. Hence the letters patent refounding the school are sealed with the Duchy seal, not with the great seal of England, and further light must be sought first and foremost among the Duchy records at the Record Office. There are plenty of documents relating to the transition period, and a tangled and troubled story they record, the true inwardness of which it is not easy to arrive at. Petitions and litigation about the school went on continually to 1585. From them we gather the following story.

Edmund Browne, whom we have seen to be a chantry priest with an income of £3 14s. 7d. (p. 220), was also Schoolmaster of the Grammar School, and as such received not merely the £2 above mentioned paid out of the common fund of the church to the Grammar Schoolmaster, but also the revenues of certain lands called School or Rood lands (p. 200), with some £8 7s. 2d. a year net. Altogether, therefore, he had an income of over £13 a year from endowment; no bad pay considering that the head-masters of Winchester and of Eton only received £10 a year. The school was a free school, that is the master could not make any charge to the scholars for teaching them. The school lands were called the Rood Lands because they were given by or vested in the Rood or Holy Cross Gild of Ripon. There is considerable mystery as to the origin of this Gild, its precise relations to the school, and what happened about it at the time of the Chantries Act, which applied to gilds as well as to colleges and chantries. According to the story told in a suit in the Duchy Court by the defendant "there was a gild or fraternity in Ripon"—I modernise the spelling—"commonly named the Rood Gild, founded by the inhabitants of Ripon by licence to them granted in anno nono Henrici IV. or thereabouts, and by the same they were licensed to give for the maintenance thereof sixteen messuages and eleven acres of land." These lands, being gild lands, ought to have fallen to the Crown under the Chantries Act, but William Scott, Anthony Frankish, and others "did practice and procure one Richard Tyrrie, then one of the priests of the said gild," to conceal the said lands from the commissioners under the Act in consideration of £6 13s. 4d. Thereon the said Scott and company "gave an untrue information to the commissioners that the same were school lands, asking the commissioners to appoint the same to continue to a school for ever, which they would not, but said they would certify the same lands according to their information." Afterwards, in 1550, Anthony Frankish and others seeking to displace Edmund Browne "teaching a school there," Browne went to the Chancellor of the Duchy, and told him the truth, and obtained from him a lease of the lands. He then demised them to other persons; but Scott and Frankish paid him £10 down and 40s. a year for the lease; which 40s. was paid for a few years, until Browne was induced to release the payment. They then got a commission issued in the Duchy Court to the same commissioners as acted in the Chantry Certificate, and on their finding got a decree confirming the lands to the Free School for ever; and pocketed the proceeds. The same people then purchased a grant from Philip and Mary of four dissolved chantries in Ripon, and their property amounting to £30 a year, for a Free School, but this grant did not include the Rood lands. They paid the Schoolmaster £12 a year and pocketed the rest, together with the rent of the Rood lands. Then in 1577 information was given to the Crown that these lands were really gild lands, and a commission issued, which found that they were gild lands, whereon Queen Elizabeth granted them by patent to Peter Grey and Edward Grey. From them the defendant Ninian Medelton, or Middleton, bought them; and so claimed them against the governors, represented by Sir William Mallory and others, who were plaintiffs in the Chancery suit against him.

The plaintiffs by their bill had told practically the same story, except the scandalous statements about pocketing the money. They said that the lands in question were "given and assured for the common finding and maintenance of one Free School," but said nothing about a gild, except incidentally, that the property included "one house in Anesgate aforesaid called the Rood-house or School-house."

The odd thing is that there is no licence in mortmain for either school or gild eo nomine on the Patent Rolls.

There is a licence in the year stated (Pat. 9 Henry IV., pt. i., m. 34) to William Clint, clerk, and William of Ledes of Ripon, to give messuages and lands in Ripon and Norton-in-the-Dyrt to found a chantry at the altar lately erected in Ripon Collegiate Church in honour of the exaltation of the Holy Cross. In the Chantry Certificate, however, these two, who in any case were only agents, are put down as founders of S. James' Chantry (Yorkshire Chantry Surveys, ii. 359).

What is, however, probably the Rood Gild appears some years before this in the Certificates of Gilds returned to Richard II. in 1389. As these were, seemingly, unknown to Dr. Fowler when he published his Memorials of Ripon, I have given the whole "certificate of the good folk of Ripon" in its vernacular French (p. 143). There were two gilds. One was founded "in honour of God, his glorious mother Saint Mary, Saint Wilfrid, and all saints." "For the affection which they have to a holy chapel of S. Mary founded and made in the time of the said St. Wilfrid, which became by antiquity feeble and ruinous, and partly unroofed, they assembled and began a brotherhood; and at the beginning they agreed that each of them should give something of his own for the restoration and repair of the said chapel, and afterwards that each of them should give a certain sum for maintenance of a chaplain singing mass every day therein." This had been done "these ten years; without any evil device or maintenance of any quarrel, but only for benefit of the souls of themselves and all christians and their devotion" for the chapel. Several of the brethren firmly intended to put part of their possessions in mortmain for the purpose, but nothing had yet been done. "Of treasure in money they have none, nor land nor tenement nor chalice, but only a suit of vestments given them by the parson of Bedale."

There was also "the certificate of another brotherhood for the good folk of the same town, who of charity and the devotion which they had to God and holy church commenced, about ten years past, a brotherhood, only for benefit of their souls and of all christians, and since have maintained a chaplain to sing mass daily at an altar in the high church, for the souls for which they are bound and for all christians; and that without evil device or maintenance of quarrel." Like the other gild, "treasure or land or chalice or even vestment or other goods they had none, but only from their purse they each pay of their own for maintenance of the said chaplain."

The first of the two gilds is probably represented by "the chantry in the chapel called the Lady Church in Stamer-gate" in the Chantry Certificate. The other and unnamed gild must have been the Rood Gild.

The Rood loft in the minster was re-made in 1399-1400 at a cost of £3 6s. 8d. paid to William the Wright, besides 10s. for sawing the timber for it, and 1s. for "drinks" to him and the carpenter (Memorials of Ripon, iii. 133). There are frequent references to the Rood Gild in the Chamberlain's Rolls, and in wills of Ripon people.

Thus in 1439-40 (Mem. Rip., iii. 228), the earliest Chamberlain's Roll, he received 5s. 2d. "from the offerings at a mass of the brotherhood of the exaltation of Holy Cross." In 1453-4 John Rotherham of Westgate (Testamenta Eboracensia, iv. 29, 31, Surtees Society) bequeathed 2s. to the gild, and Robert Percival, smith, of Sharow gave 3s. 4d. to the brethren of the gild. In 1459 (ib., p. 86) W. Forster, chaplain, gave 2s. for the torches of the gild to burn round his corpse, and also gave the brotherhood of the gild 20s. for a vestment. In 1472-3 (Mem. Rip., iii. 243) the chamberlain received "22d. from pennies offered at the mass of the brotherhood of Holy Cross at the feast of the same." It would appear that, as was indeed the general custom of gilds, each member contributed a penny as his oblation on the gild day. We thus get a census of the members of the gild, at least approximately, since every member was expected to be present. They had fallen therefore from 62 in 1440 to 22 in 1473. In 1478-9 (ib., p. 251) 21d.; in 1502-3 2s. 8d. was received. The 32 of this year shrank to 13 in 1525-6, and to only 7 in 1540-1. A similar shrinkage is observed in all the voluntary offerings. The tenets of Wiclif and Luther and the spirit of the age were adverse to chantries and gilds, quite apart from any royal proceedings.

There were, it appears from the evidence taken by commission in 1577, a Master of the gild and two Collectors of rents, called by a quaint corruption culladres, cullyores, culliers, or cullyers (p. 207 seq.), and two priests called Rood priests, who "did lie" in the Rood house in Agnesgate, in which house there was a yearly feast on the Rood day, and one of the witnesses (p. 211) served as butler at the feast when his father was master. The two last priests were Sir Richard Tirry and Sir Richard Geffrayson or Jefferson. This Sir Richard Tirry appears in 1540 (Mem. Rip., iii. 281) as a chaplain of the prebend of Monkton, in which capacity he accounted to the Chamberlain for the pennies offered by the communicants of the parish at Easter. He was apparently parochial chaplain; did, that is, the prebendary's parochial work. He was in the same year tenant of one of the chambers belonging to the minster, either one above the Grammar School-house or one above the wood-house, for which he paid 2s. 8d. a year rent, and a co-tenant 1s. 4d. (Mem. Rip., iii. 280). Jefferson was parochial chaplain of the prebend of Nunwick, and was still such in 1556-7 (p. 312). Tirry in 1567 had become one of the vicars of the minster, and in that capacity was complained of at an archbishop's visitation (Mem. Rip., iii. 345) as being "long suspected to live incontinentlie with a woman, by whom it is thoughte he hath had divers children, which woman he keepeth at this present very offensively in his chamber with him." But this woman was, or became, his wife; at least, "Janet Tirrie, widow, of thage of 52 years," who gave evidence in 1577 (p. 209) said that she "was wief unto Sir Richard Tyrrey, who was last priest of the said guild." According to her he received the gild rents, and William Scot and others "did will her said husband to be good and keep counsel about the Rood lands, and they would recompense him." Another witness, Middleton, said that "they gave Sir E. Browne, priest, £10 and 40s. a year," and "did also promise to have given Sir R. Tyrrey £6 13s. 4d. for that they should conceal and not make known by what title the said lands were holden, nor of whom."

A list of "the said lands" is given by Marmaduke Middleton (p. 204-5), and it tallies in every particular with the lands leased to Browne as School lands; except that in the lease to Browne there is no mention of the "house nigh Ripon Church called the Rood-house now in the occupation of Christopher Watson," and of "one acre of meadow lying in Swilmire yngs within the fields of Ripon, called the Rood Great Acre, in the tenure of Ralph Ripley, alias Clerk," and "one close with a barn in Ripon in the tenure of" the same. The plaintiffs in their bill in the Duchy suit (p. 216) called the house in Agnesgate "the Rood-house or School-house," and averred that it equally with the school lands were "given and assured for the common finding of one free school, of old time founded and erected in the said town of Ripon by the well-disposed persons of the inhabitants and parishioners of the town and parish of Ripon, and that the issues and profits thereof had been continually employed and bestowed upon one discreet and learned schoolmaster there, elect and chosen from time to time as need required by the substantial and discreet persons of the said parish." Whether the Rood Acre was omitted because of its tell-tale name, or Ripley was left in possession to keep him quiet, we cannot tell. The evidence taken on the first commission (p. 175-6), which, as it included William Mallet, the Crown receiver of the honour of Pontefract, was certainly not a packed one (as alleged by the defendant in 1577), showed that the school had existed and enjoyed the lands for 70 years and upwards before 1553. As the bill in the Duchy Court was only dismissed for want of jurisdiction (p. 225), presumably because some of the gild lands were outside Ripon, and therefore outside the Duchy, and the final decision in the Exchequer a year later (p. 225) was in favour of the School, it must be inferred that the lands in question were really school lands.

The whole truth probably was that, though school lands, they were also gild lands. Like the famous Gild of Holy Rood or Holy Cross at Stratford-on-Avon, the gild probably maintained, or rather helped to maintain, the schoolmaster as well as two gild priests. Considering that the total value of the lands was only £8 7s. 2d. there was not a large income to be divided among them. But in fact the gilds which in 1389 depended, as we have seen, entirely on voluntary contributions, the entrance fees and annual subscriptions of their members, even in 1548 derived their income mainly from the same source. Moreover, each of the gild priests had, as we have also seen, other employment and sources of income.

The upshot of the whole matter seems to be that the stipend of £2 a year paid out of the common fund of the minster for the Grammar Schoolmaster, adequate enough, no doubt, in the twelfth century, had become inadequate by the fifteenth century; and so with a view to make the school free of fees, at all events for children of the town and parish of Ripon, it was further endowed by the Rood Gild as a free school. Strictly speaking, there is no doubt that the school lands, being vested in the gild brotherhood and part of its possessions, passed to the Crown on the dissolution of the gild by the Chantries Act of Edward VI., subject only to the obligation laid on the Crown of continuing schools by its commissioners, and making adequate provision out of the gild funds. This happened in the case of the Holy Cross Gild at Stratford-on-Avon, where the school was continued "until further order," and eventually re-endowed by the town buying back from Edward VI. the gild property and obtaining a charter, practically continuing the old trusts.

At Ripon the inhabitants attempted to conceal the fact that the school lands were really part of the gild property, and so to retain the school endowment undiminished and without having to buy it back. They would, perhaps, have been successful if they had not tried to dismiss the master, Edmund Browne. This was perhaps because he adhered to the "old religion," as in 1567 (p. 194) he was "commonly reputed and taken for a misliker of Christ's religion now established." He turned traitor. On this both parties to the Duchy suit are agreed. He went to the Duchy authorities and must have told them the truth, viz. that the lands were school lands, but part of the gild possessions. Whether the Duchy retained the Rood-house and the Rood Acre and cottage in Ripley's hands as commission, or what became of them, is not clear. The rest of the possessions at all events were leased to Browne, and the lease is printed (p. 165 seq.) from the original still in possession of the Governors of the School. The office copy is also preserved at the Record Office (Duchy of Lancaster, Register of Leases, vol. 31, Edward VI., f. 122), where it is headed "Terre date pro sustentacione libere scole infra villam de Rypon Edmundo Browne." The lease was for 21 years, but subject to the condition that "if he left his office of Schoolmaster of the said school"—a distinct recognition of his holding and having held the office—"and does not exercise himself in teaching boys there," the lease should be void. He was to pay the full rent of £8 7s. 2d. to the Crown.

At the same time the Duchy or the Commissioners seem (p. 170) to have granted him a pension of the same amount in respect of his loss of office as Schoolmaster. So, for simplicity, the Duchy Court made an order that the auditor should allow him the rent as a set-off against the pension. Master Browne, therefore, was set up as an independent person in possession of the old endowment without anybody to control him. Having only a life interest he very naturally stopped doing any repairs to the houses, "whereby they be come to great ruin and decay, so that the occupiers of the same will not pay any rent till reparations thereof be made." Then "the same Edmund, willing to make amends for his said untrue information, gave and assigned his interest in the premises to the parishioners." They were to pay him the rent, his old salary of £8 7s. 2d., and to do the repairs. The parishioners, however, "dare not meddle with the occupation" until the King's title was got out of the way. So they filed a Bill in the Duchy Court, which was a court of equity (pp. 171-3), setting out the fact, asserting that school lands were not "within the compass or danger of the late Act of Chantries," and asking for a commission and an order for the continuance of the School. The commission was issued 20 March, 155 $\frac{2}{3}$ (p. 173), and the evidence of, among others, three of "the oldest inhabitants" of 60, 80, and 90 years of age taken that the lands had always been school lands. Edward VI. died before any decree was made, but that seems to have made no difference, for in 155 $\frac{3}{4}$ a decree was made by the Duchy Court "for a Free School in Ripon for ever." After considering the depositions and "other proofs" it was ordered that the "said scolle shalbe and contynewe a frescole for ever." A governing body was appointed of "eight or ten of the best disposed, discreet, and most substantial of the town and parish, whereof Anthony Frankysse, gentleman, during his lifetime, to be one," who were to have the appointment of a "good, honest, virtuous, and well-learned schoolmaster to teach the said school for the erudition and virtuous bringing up of the children there," and also to have the "rule and letting of the premises." They were to apply the income for the various purposes of the school, "to the exercise of virtue and discretion in bringing up of infants, children, and other scholars that shall come to learn and be taught in the said school."

Mr. Frankish and the rest were not content with this. An endowment of £8 a year was not enough when the assistance derived from the minster and its chantries was withdrawn. They proceeded therefore to obtain from the Crown a grant of the property of four chantries, three, those of the Assumption of the Virgin, of S. James, and of S. John the Evangelist, in the minster, the fourth, that of the Virgin "in the Hallgarth," or as it is described in the Chantry Certificate "in the manor of Ripon," the archbishop's manor which had passed to the Crown under one of Henry VIII.'s numerous exchanges.

The values and the full particulars of the endowments of those chantries at the time are stated in a terrier in possession of the Governors (pp. 194-200) prepared apparently in view of the charter. It will be seen from the statements appended to the valuation of each chantry that the net value given in the terrier was subject to considerable deductions owing to the ruinous state in which the houses had been allowed to fall. A total net value of £16 14s. 9d. was thus reduced to £12 17s., a fall of nearly 25 per cent.

The charter, dated 27 June, 1555, was under the Duchy Seal, not as usual in such charters under the Great Seal, owing to the chantries being in the Duchy. Its terms are identical with those for the grammar schools of Edward VI.

It is almost word for word the same with the charter of Edward VI. for Sherborne School. That, though not the first of Edward's school charters, was the first which constituted a school under a special governing body created ad hoc, and was evidently framed as a model for all subsequent school charters. An analysis of the form will be found in an article on Sherborne School in the Archæological Journal for March, 1898, and need not be here repeated. There are, of course, a few verbal differences due to the difference of places, names, and values, and to the grant being under the seal of the duchy instead of the kingdom, and the peculiar position of Queen Mary, but these may all be summed up in the words mutatis mutandis. In all essential particulars, the Marian is the same as the Edwardian charter.

The charter contained no express mention of the old school lands confirmed by the decree of the Duchy Court the year before. Whether the clause following the Habendum, which directs the governors to apply the profits of the lands "now given and granted, or hereafter to be given and granted, acquired or appointed," covers the old school lands, or whether the word "now" refers only to the charter, is not quite clear. That clause is the only one which is not found in the Sherborne charter. It may have been expressly put in to meet the case of the old school lands, though the words "now given" can perhaps hardly be interpreted to mean "already" given.

We do not know whether Edmund Browne was still Schoolmaster under the charter, or whether another was appointed. By 1567 he would seem at all events to have been removed, when he was said (p. 194) to "lurk about Ripon," and to be "commonly harboured at the house of one Robert Kettlewood" (which by the way is probably a mistake for Kettlewell). His successor John Nettleton was (p. 194), for religious causes no doubt, "discharged" by the High Commission Court "from his office of schoolmastership," but "to keep the same till a new master be provided, lest the youth be neglected and untaught."

No news of the school for the next seven years may be taken to mean good news. The Exchequer proceedings already mentioned seem to have been begun in 1576, the commission for inquiry, as to whether the old school lands were not the Rood Gild lands, being issued on 25 November that year. By an unfortunate mistake the year is misprinted, on p. 201, 1577. Elizabeth's reign began 17 November, 1558. Therefore the 19th year began 17 November, 1576, not 1577. As a result of the commission an information in the Exchequer was laid by the attorney-general on 1 March, 1577 (p. 226), and on the 18th a patent issued (p. 222) granting the lands to Peter Grey, esquire, and his son. We have already referred to the long struggle that took place. The case in the Exchequer was adjourned and adjourned (p. 226-7), while proceedings in the Duchy Court went on from July, 1579, to February, 1582, when they ended in smoke. In February, 1583, the case was finally heard in the Exchequer, the Attorney-General entering a nolle prosequi, the defendants, the Governors' tenants, being dismissed "without day" and the Governors so remaining in possession of the lands.

On 12 June, 1585 (p. 225), the Governors, in the name of Wilfred Baye (p. 228), obtained an exemplification or office copy of the decree in their favour.

There are no other documents relating to the school in the Governors' possession earlier than a minute book beginning 10 October, 1623. The fly-leaves and cover of this book contain a terrier of the school lands in 1608, and leases of 29 November 39 Elizabeth, 1596, and 1608 to Kettlewell. The minute book is exceedingly disappointing, consisting of nothing but records of the appointment of new Governors, and one or two notices of leases, except that the usher's pay was settled in 1623 to be £2 a year. The names of Mallory and Staveley, which appear in the Edwardian, Marian, and Elizabethan documents, appear again here. We do not get any notices of the appointment of masters till 1650, when, on 29 November, Roger Holmes, gentleman, was appointed in the room of Richard Palmes deceased. The entry as to Holmes' appointment on the death of his predecessor suggests that the school went on without let or hindrance during the Commonwealth. After the Restoration, 23 May, 1661 (p. 229), Roger Holmes "freely and voluntarily"—we suspect what that means under the counter-revolution of the time—resigned his office, and was succeeded 1 October by Mr. Charles Oxley, late of "Hartford." The usher, Thomas Thompson, was allowed to continue. This usher took the school in 1676 during the vacancy of the head mastership, and in 1685 received the reward of long service, after serving under four successive heads, in being made Headmaster himself. He held for nearly twenty years, his successor, Mr. Thomas Lloyd, of Jesus, Cambridge, being elected 30 May, 1704.

The letting of the whole of the school property to Mr. Charles Oxley, the master in 1674, was a proceeding remarkably like "farming the school." But it was presumably connected in some way with the order made the same day, 22 June, for the rebuilding of the school in that year. This school was in the old place at the corner of Agnesgate, just below the minster. Its site is now occupied by an elementary school.

The governing body having been reconstituted under a scheme prepared by the Endowed Schools Commissioners and approved by the Queen in Council in 1872, the Grammar School was removed in 1874 to a new site, comprising an extensive cricket ground at Bishopston, about a mile from the town. New buildings were added in 1889; and the old school is now well equipped to meet all modern requirements.

It only remains to give thanks to those who have kindly enabled these facts in the history of schools to be here collected.

To the Dean and Chapter of York, and therein especially to the Very Reverend Arthur Purey-Cust, Dean, and to the late Chancellor Raine, and the Chapter Clerk, Mr. T. B. Whytehead, I am indebted for free access to the records, for much help and for liberty to publish the results.

To the Town Council of Beverley and to the Town Clerk, Mr. Willis Mills, I owe special gratitude for their special favour in allowing me their documents at home.

The Hon. and Very Rev. W. H. Fremantle, Dean of Ripon, the Governors of Ripon Grammar School, and the Head Master, Mr. C. Swinton Bland, I have to thank for free use of documents of Minster and School.

Lastly, I must thank Mr. W. Brown, the ever-helpful Secretary of the Surtees Society, and Mr. J. Bilson, F.R.I.B.A., whose love of Beverley Minster has led him into many fields of research, for much help and criticism.

EARLY YORKSHIRE SCHOOLS.

CANON LAW ON CATHEDRAL GRAMMAR SCHOOLS.^a

A.D. 826.

[Decreti Prima Pars. Dist. xxxvii. c. 12.]

Magistros et doctores Episcopi congruis locis consistent.

Item ex synodo Eugenii Papæ [II. c. 34], 826.

Pope
Eugenius II.

DE quibusdam locis ad nos refertur, neque magistros, neque curam inveniri pro studio literarum. Idcirco ab universis episcopis subjectisque plebibus, et aliis locis, in quibus necessitas occurreret, omnino cura et diligentia habeatur, ut magistri et doctores constituentur, qui studia literarum liberaliumque artium dogmata assidue doceant, quia in his maxime divina manifestantur atque declarantur mandata.

Complaints have been made that in some places no masters nor endowment for a Grammar School is found. In all Bishops' sees and other places, where necessary, masters and doctors are to be established to teach Grammar Schools and the principles of the liberal arts.

In indice etiam synodi a Gregorio VII. Romæ habitæ talis cujusdam capitis hæc ponitur summa: "Ut omnes episcopi artes literarum in suis ecclesiis docere faciant."

DE MAGISTRIS.

Et ne aliquid exigatur pro licentia docendi.

[Decretalium D. Gregorii Papæ IX. Lib. V. Tit. V.]

Cap. I.

Ecclesia cathedralis providere debet magistro de beneficio, qui clericos eiusdem ecclesiæ et alios pauperes gratis doceat; et vendens licentiam docendi, aut interdicens idoneum ad docendum, beneficio privetur.

provide a benefice for a master to teach the clerks of the church and other poor persons, gratis.

indigentibus sicut pia mater providere tenetur, ne pauperibus, qui parentum opibus juvari non possunt, legendi et proficiendi opportunitas subtrahatur, per unamquamque cathedralem ecclesiam magistro, qui clericos eiusdem ecclesiæ et scholares pauperes gratis doceat, competens aliquod beneficium præbeatur, quo docentis necessitas sublevetur et discentibus via pateat ad doctrinam.

In aliis quoque restituatur ecclesiis seu monasteriis, si retroactis temporibus aliquid in eis ad hoc fuerit deputatum.

Pro licentia vero docendi nullus omnino pretium exigat, vel, sub obtentu alicuius consuetudinis, ab eis, qui docent, aliquid quærat, nec docere quemquam, qui sit idoneus, petita licentia interdicat. Qui autem contra hoc venire præsumserit ab ecclesiastico fiat beneficio alienus.

Dignum quippe esse videtur ut in ecclesia Dei fructum sui laboris non habeat, qui cupiditate animi, dum vendit docendi licentiam, ecclesiasticum profectum nititur impedire.

Cap. II.

Pro licentia docendi nihil exigi debet vel promitti, et exactum restitui et promissum remitti debet; et negligente inferiore prælato ad magistrum constituendum, supplebit hoc superior.

1159-81.

Alexander III. Wintoniensi Episcopo.

Pope Alexander III. to Bishop of Winchester.

Abolish in your diocese all fees for licences to teach.

PROHIBEAS attentius de cetero ne in parochia tua pro licentia docendi aliquos exigatur aliquid aut etiam promittatur. Si quid vero postea solutum fuerit vel promissum, remitti promissum facias et restitui appellatione cessante solutum, sciens quod scriptum est "Gratis accepistis, gratis date."

Sane si quis occasione hujus prohibitionis distulerit magistros in locis idoneis instituere, tibi liceat de concessione nostra, omni contradictione et appellatione postposita, ibi aliorum instructioni præficere viros providos, honestos et discretos.

Cap. III.

Pro licentia docendi pecunia exigi non debet, etiamsi hoc habeat consuetudo.

The more learned the Gallican church

QUANTO Gallicana ecclesia majorum personarum scientia et honestate præfulget, et cautius nititur evitare quæ confundere videantur ecclesiasticam honestatem, tanto vehementiori dignos eos esse animadversione censemus, qui nomen Magistri Scholarum et dignitatem assumunt in ecclesiis vestris, et sine certo pretio ecclesiasticis viris docendi alios licentiam non impendunt.

the more strongly ought the custom of the dignitary called school-master of charging fees for licence to teach to be put down. Cause it to be put down in your churches on pain of ex-communication.

Quum autem hæc prava et enormis consuetudo a cupiditatis radice processerit, et decorem ad nudum ecclesiasticæ honestatis confundat, providendum vobis est et summopere satagendum, ut consuetudo ipsa de ecclesiis vestris penitus extirpetur, quum vobis præcipue et specialiter adscribatur, si quid in ecclesiis eisdem laude dignum inveniatur vel reprehensione notandum.

Nos quoque qui licet immeriti dispensante clementia conditoris suprema fungimur potestate, tantæ cupiditatis et rapacitatis vitium nolentes immendatum relinqui, fraternitati vestræ per apostolica scripta mandamus, quatenus consuetudine ipsa de vestris ecclesiis extirpata, sub anathematis interminatione hoc inhibere curetis, distincte præcipientes, ut, quicumque viri idonei et literati voluerint regere studia literarum, sine molestia et exactione qualibet scholas regere permittantur, ne scientia de cetero pretio videatur exponi, quæ singulis gratis debet impendi.

Si qui vero hujusmodi prohibitionis vel præcepti extiterint transgressores, eos auctoritate nostra et vestra officiis et dignitatibus spoliatis. Porro si hoc juxta mandatum nostrum corrigere neglexeritis, negligentiam vestram gravem habebimus et molestam, etc. Dat. Tusculi xiii. Kalendas Novembris.

Cap. IV.

In qualibet cathedrali ecclesia, vel alia in facultatibus sufficienti, debet a prælato vel capitulo unus magister eligi, cui redditus unius præbendæ debent assignari; in metropolitana vero ecclesia etiam eligi debet theologus. Et si ad grammaticum et theologum non sufficit, provideat ipsi theologo ex redditibus suæ ecclesiæ, et grammatico faciat provideri in aliqua ecclesiarum suæ civitatis vel dioceseos.

et via pateret discentibus ad doctrinam."

Verum quoniam in multis ecclesiis id minime observatur
Nos, prædictum roborantes statutum, adiicimus, ut non solum in qualibet Cathedrali Ecclesia sed etiam in aliis, quarum sufficere poterunt facultates, constituatur magister idoneus, a prælato cum capitulo, seu majori et seniore parte capituli eligendus, qui clericos ecclesiarum ipsarum [et aliarum] gratis in grammatica facultate ac aliis instruat juxta posse.

Sane Metropolis Ecclesia theologum nihilominus habeat qui sacerdotes et alios in sacra pagina doceat et in his præ-sertim informet, quæ ad curam animarum spectare noscuntur.

Assignetur autem cuilibet magistrorum a capitulo unius præbendæ proventus, et pro theologo a metropolitano tantundem; non quod propter hoc efficiatur canonicus sed tamdiu reditus ipsos percipiat, quamdiu perstiterit in docendo.

Quod si forte de duobus Ecclesia Metropolis gravetur, theologo juxta modum prædictum ipsa provideat, grammatico vero in alia ecclesia suæ civitatis sive diocœsis quæ sufficere valeat, faciat provideri.

Justitiæ cultor, legis tuba, præco salutis,
 Spes inopum, orphanisque pater, solator egentum,
 Trux rigidis, blandusque bonis, durusque superbis :
 Fortis in adversis, humilis fuit inque secundis,
 Mente sagax, non ore loquax, sed strenuus actu.
 Cui quantum crevit cumulati culmen honoris,
 Tantum mens humili sese pietate subegit.
 De quo versifico paulo plus pergere gressu,
 Euboricæ mecum libeat tibi, quæso, juventus,
 Hic quia sæpe tuos perfudit nectare sensus,
 Mellifluo dulces eructans pectore succos.
 Quem mox a primis ratio pulcherrima cunis
 Corripuit rerum, summamque vehebat in arcem

Hic fuit ergo satis claris genitoribus ortus,
 Ex quorum cura studiis mox traditur almis,
 Atque monasterio puerilibus inditur annis,
 Sensibus ut fragilis sacris adolesceret ætas.
 De puero nec cassa fuit spes tanta parentum.
 Jam puer egregius crescebat corpore quantum,
 Ingenio tantum librorum proficiebat.
 Sic meritis crescens annis et mente sagaci,
 Jam Levita sacer condigno est ordine factus.
 Hunc bene dum felix adolescens gessit honorem,
 Jura sacerdotii juvenis suscepit honestus,
 Cresceret ut gradibus, meritis qui creverat almis.
 Tunc pius et prudens doctor simul atque sacerdos,
 Pontificique comes Ecgbert conjunctus adhæsit, Cui quoque sanguineo fuerat jam jure propinquus.

to brethren of church of York.

DILECTISSIMIS et valde venerabilibus in Christi charitate

Eboracensis ecclesiæ fratribus, vestræ filius pietatis Albinus diaconus Salutem.

Vos fragiles infantiae meae annos materno fovistis affectu et lascivum pueritiae tempus pia sustinuistis patientia, et paternae constigationis disciplinis ad perfectam edocuistis aetatem, et sacrarum eruditione disciplinarum roborastis . . .
[Pious wishes for them.]

Vos quoque, qui estis aetate filii sed meritorum sanctitate patres, per divinam obtestor clementiam, nunquam eruditionis vestrae in sanctis orationibus obliviscimini magistrum. Testis enim cordis mei mihi est inspector, quod devote vestrum semper in ecclesiasticis disciplinis et spirituali doctrina desiderabat profectum . . . Memores mei estote : ego vester ero, sive in vita, sive in morte. Et forte miserabitur mei Deus, ut cujus infantiam aluistis, ejus senectutem sepeliatis

Omnem a vestra sancta conversatione repellite segnitiam
. . . . melius est servis Dei animam ecclesiasticis ornare moribus, quam corpus, laicorum consuetudine, pompatica vestire vanitate. Et melius est sacra matris ecclesiae mun-dissima calcare limina, quam lutulentas villanae foeditatis semitas frequentare.

You nursed me
as a baby, endured me as a boy, and with paternal floggings brought me to man's estate.

For God's sake
do not forget your old schoolmaster in your prayers, who did his best.

Perhaps he may be buried among you.

Do not be idle
or wear smart clothes, or walk about

the dirty streets.

FOUNDATION OF LICHFIELD GRAMMAR SCHOOL (?) BY OFFA AND ALCUIN.

[Alcuini Epistola 49, l. c., p. 214]

DOMINO excellentissimo Offano Regi humilis levita Alcuinus Salutem.

Fideliter voluntati tuae semper placere cupiens hunc meum clarissimum filium ad vos remisi sicut petisti, deprecans ut eum honorifice habeatis, donec ad vos, volente Deo, veniam.

Nec eum sinite otiosum vagare, nec ebrietati servire, sed praevidete ei discipulos, et praecipientes praecipite ut diligenter doceat.

Scio quod bene dicit, et utinam bene proficiat, quia discipulorum meorum profectus merces est mihi apud Deum.

Et valde mihi placet quod tantam habetis intentionem lectionis, ut lumen sapientiae luceat in regno vestro, quod multis modo extinguitur in locis.

DILECTISSIMO in Christo filio Eanbaldo Archiepiscopo devotus per omnia pater Albinus salutem.

Laus et gloria Domino Deo Omnipotenti, qui dies meos in prosperitate bona conservavit, ut in filii mei charissimi exaltatione gauderem, et aliquem ego ultimus ecclesiæ vernaculus, ejus donante gratia, qui est omnium bonorum largitor, erudiem ex filiis meis qui dignus haberetur, dispensator esse mysteriorum Christi, et laborare vice mea in ecclesia, ubi ego nutritus et eruditus fueram, et præesse thesauris sapientiæ, in quibus me magister meus dilectus Helbrechtus archiepiscopus heredem reliquit.

Prævideat sancta solertia tua magistros pueris; clero^a separentur separati more illorum, qui libros legant, qui cantilenæ inserviant, qui scribendi studio deputentur. Habeas et singulis his ordinibus magistros suos, ne vacantes otio vagi discurrant per loca, et inanes exerceant ludos, vel aliis manci-pentur ineptiis. Hæc omnia et solertissima, fili charissime, tua consideret providentia, quatenus in sede principali gentis nostræ totius bonitatis et eruditionis fons inveniatur; et ex eo sitiens viator vel ecclesiasticæ disciplinæ amator, quidquid desiderat anima sua, haurire valeat.

Consideret quoque tua diligentissima in eleemosynis pietas ubi xenodochia, id est, Hospitalia fieri jubeas, in quibus sit quotidiana pauperum et peregrinorum susceptio, et ex vestris substantiis habeat solatia.

REVERENDO domino ac patri in Christo, W[altero] D. G. Ebor. Archiepiscopo, Angliæ primati, suus filius devotus W[illelmus] Cancellarius Ebor. ecclesiæ, salutem cum omni subiectione debita filiali.

Ut animo vestro intentio scribentis adhæreat, et sinuentur ipsius verba cum suo pondere, ne scripta leviter inutili volatu pertranseant, aut fastidium forsitan generent graviter intellecta, qui populo Dei regendo divino providentia ordinantur actus suos debent tanta maturitate pensare, tanta circumspectione discretionis dirigere, ut nihil inveniatur in eis quod oculis Divinæ Majestatis offendat, aut inter fideles materiem scandali valeat suscitare. Videat igitur vestra paternitas reverenda quid divina numina, quid humanæ laudis præconia ex hoc valeant digne fari, quod redditum perpetuum de synodalibus, nomine cancellariæ Eboracensis ecclesiæ, cujus jura et libertates totis viribus defendere tenemur, mihi debitum, et a prædecessoribus vestris ab antiquo benigne solutum, temporibus vestris, unius termini solutione tantummodo subducta, penitus subtraxistis; immo, salva reverentia vestra, eandem cancellariam ipso reddito spoliastis.

Quod, si sic sub dissimulatione transiret, mihi in præjudicium et dictæ cancellariæ non modicam læsionem. Hinc est quod, multiplicatis per quinquennium precum instantiis, preces accumulo, supplicans humiliter et devote, quatenus præfatum redditum dudum subtractum restitui, et deinceps sine difficultate vestra dominatio solvi præcipiat cum effectu. Sic me, si placet, ad pristinum officium revocantes quem habetis, et per Dei gratiam instantius habebitis, in reverentia vobis exhibenda præcipuum in devotione fidelem, in serviendi voluntate sollicitum, et ad cuncta beneplacita semper paratum. Quid autem super præmissis vestra paternitas duxerit faciendum mihi vestro, si placet, per latorem præsentium innotescat.

Valeat paternitas vestra per tempora longiora.

xxvii^o die mensis Novembris coram reverendis viris Magistro J. de Warrico, R. de Cestria, T. Sampson, T. de la Mare et J. Berengario, præsentibus et capitulum facientibus, comparuit personaliter in prædicto capitulo Dominus Cancellarius una cum Magistro Ada de Eboraco, curiæ Eboracensis advocato, et Magistro J. de Beverlaco; statimque dictus magister Adam cœpit excusare Cancellarium sub hoc forma; primo enim dixit et protestabatur tanquam [ex debito dignitatis] suæ Dominum Cancellarium tunc ibidem præsentem, fuisse semper et esse paratum facere et adimplere omnia et singula quæ incumbunt dignitati et officio cancellariæ suæ in eadem ecclesia, secundum vim formam et effectum statuti super dicta dignitate penes capitulum registrati, et quatenus ad id de jure deberet artari.

Quo ad Sub-cancellarium dixit quod facere vellet in hoc parte quod de jure et statuto ejusdem ecclesiæ fieri deberet, dum tamen in perceptione xx^s de scolis grammaticalibus non impediretur, prout in constitutione consimili Succentoris de scolis cantus, secundum vim, formam et effectum, etc.

Quo ad Magistrum Scholarum grammaticalium dixit quod ingressurus erat religionem et annum probationis nondum compleverat, unde potuerit redire, tamen ex habundanti, dixit quod vellet omnem diligentiam apponere circa magistrum requirendum et scolis præficiendum; quod si idoneum de facili non poterit invenire, quod tunc ad nominationem capituli unum magistrum scolis grammaticalibus præficeret.

Demum dictis rationibus Magister Adam de Twysilton dixit, ex parte dictorum dominorum de capitulo tunc præsentium, quod non erat intentionis suæ de capitulo dictum Cancellarium vel dignitatem suam in aliquo novo censu sibi imponendo onerare cum prætensione tituli faciendi publicum instrumentum super hoc, sed tantum exigere ea quæ ad laudem Dei fieri consueverunt ab antiquo, et fieri debent.

Unde demum Magister Adam de Ebor. dixit quod Dominus Cancellarius mittet ad eundem ingressum religionem, et explorabit voluntatem ingressi, si vellet exire et redire ad scholas.

Item petiit quod Domini de Capitulo nominarent unam certam personam, et Dominus Cancellarius ipsum admitteret ad scholas grammaticales. Quibus factis dixerunt cum procuratore quod non impedirent Cancellarium de faciendo ea in scolis grammaticalibus et de exigenda pensione a scolis, applicanda videlicet Subcancellario Chori, dum tamen de jure hoc facere posset, et aliter non.

Demumque, post magnam altercationem Magister Johannes de Beverlaco requisivit in præsentia J. de Tyra omnes tunc in capitulo præsentis, quorum nomina sunt expressa, quatinus in præmissis perhiberent testimonium rei veritati.

T. Chaundeler,
dean of Hereford and chancellor of York, of James Sheffield as master of the York Grammar
School for life.

^a A great person. He was a scholar of Winchester, fellow and warden of New College, vice-chancellor and chancellor of Oxford, canon of Southwell, York, &c.

^b This James Sheffield was probably a relative of, Dean Sheffield. He died in 1504, according to his will, which does not state that he was master of St. Peter's School.

Proviso for removal for incapacity by illness, or other just cause.

Inhibition of other grammar schools within 10 miles of York, except in privileged places.

Dean and chapter confirm because appointment is for life, instead of statutable three years.

Proviso semper quod si præfatus Jacobus propter infirmitatem continuam vel corporis debilitatem, aut aliam justam causam, minus commode scholarum prædictarum regimini insistere poterit seu alias eisdem scholis intendere neglexerit, quod extunc si, trina monitione præhabita, de sufficienti deputato per nos vel successores nostros admittendo infra tres menses post tertiam monitionem sibi factam scholis prædictis providere recusaverit, præfatum Jacobum ab officio et regimine scholarum prædictarum nobis et successoribus nostris amovere et alteri conferre licebit. Insuper, cum ex jure prærogativo præfata ecclesiæ metropoliticæ Ebor. nullus infra spatium decem miliarium a dicta civitate scolas teneat, inhibemus, et per ipsum Jacobum quotiens et quando sibi viderit expedire inhiberi volumus, omnibus et singulis ne quis in civitate antedicta, aut locis aliis infra spatium decem miliarium a dicta civitate existentibus, et ipsam circum, scolas grammaticales, scholares et pueros in arte grammaticali informando et instruendo teneat vel exerceat, absque nostra vel successorum nostrorum licentia speciali; locis tantum in ea parte privilegiatis dumtaxat exceptis. In cujus rei testimonium sigillum decanatus nostri prædicti, quod manibus habuimus, his apposuimus. Dat. Herford. iiij^{to} die mensis Januarii, anno Domini millesimo cccclxxxij.

Nosque præfati Decanus et Capitulum ecclesiæ metropoliticæ antedictæ omnia et singula in eisdem literis reverendi M. Thomæ Chaundeler contenta etc. quia in hoc casu requiritur, clausula in statuto "de Cancellario et ejus officio" collationem scholarum grammaticalium magistro in artibus regenti et non ultra triennium concernente, a dicto statuto auctoritate nostræ plenæ convocationis solemniter celebratæ deleta et abrogata, in aliquo non obstante, approbamus, ratificamus, et tenore præsentium confirmamus. In cujus rei testimonium sigillum nostrum commune præsentibus est appensum. Dat. Eboraci in domo nostra capitulari, xxij^o die mensis Maii, anno Domini millesimo ccc^{mo} octogesimo sexto.

Ordinatio ecclesiæ de Stillingflete ac ejus vicariatus et hospitalis de Bouthom, ac duarum cantuariarum in ecclesia Eboracensi pro Roberto et Willelmo de Pykering et aliis.

1330.

UNIVERSIS Christi fidelibus præsentis literas inspecturis Willelmus, permissione divina Ebor. Archiepiscopus, Angliæ primas, Salutem in eo quem peperit Puerpera Salutaris.

William [Greenfield], Archbishop of York.

In odorem suavitatis nobis occurrunt pietatis opera, per quæ divini cultus promovetur augmentum, et sacerdotum pauperum propter debilitatem vel adversam corporis valetudinem celebrare divina non valentium, sustentatio perpetua providetur. Nos munus credimus divinæ pietati acceptum, si, per nostræ provisionis auxilium, tam laudabilia operationum opera ad laudem Altissimi et consolationem egenorum multiplicentur et servantur in futurum.

Pious exordium

Advertentes itaque pium desiderium et laudabile propositum dilecti filii Magistri Roberti de Pykering, Decani ecclesiæ nostræ Beati Petri Eboracensis, fundatoris Hospitalis Beatæ Mariæ in Boutham juxta Eboracum per nos auctoritate pontificali acceptati, approbati, et etiam confirmati, intendentes [ut] in eodem sit unus magister perpetuus, capellanus, cujus magistri præsentatio ad prædictum Magistrum Robertum de Pykering in vita sua et post mortem ejus ad heredes suos; admissio autem et institutio ejusdem ad nos et successores nostros sede archiepiscopali plena; et, ea vacante, ad Decanum et Capitulum nostræ Eboracensis ecclesiæ pertineant; Qui quidem capellani et sui successores, universi et singuli, singulis diebus quibus commode poterunt cessantibus impedi-mentis legitimis et occupationibus necessariis, celebrare divina personaliter teneantur :

with two chaplains to pray for the souls of Edward II., my brother, Walter [] Bishop of Lichfield, the Archbishops and canons of York, Robert and William Pickering, Thomas Fishburne, and all faithful departed ; to have their victuals and clothes, or 24s. a year each instead of clothes.

To feed and clothe 6 old and sick chaplains unable to perform service.

Appropriation of church of Stillingfleet, with consent of R^d of Grimston, rector, and Hugh Walsham, master of the hospital.

Et nichilominus assumant et secum habeant et teneant duos capellanos providos et ydoneos inibi suo proprio moraturos et divina celebraturos imperpetuum pro animabus quondam Edwardi filii regis Edwardi, progenitorum suorum quondam Regum Angliæ et hæredum suorum et pro nostra et fratris nostri quondam Walteri Lichfeldensis Episcopi, ac Archiepiscoporum et Canonicorum Eboracensium, dictique Magistri Roberti, Magistrique Willelmi fratris germani ejusdem, antecessorum et heredum eorundem, Thomæ de Fischeburne et omnium fidelium defunctorum, quodque eidem capellani sustineantur competenter, in victualibus et indumentis corporibus suis necessariis vel pro indumentis eisdem solvantur cuilibet eorum xxiiij^s annuatim :

Assumant insuper et sustineant imperpetuum in eodem hospitali in victu et vestitu alios sex capellanos senes et valetudinarios, non valentes divina officia celebrare :

Qui quidem Magister Robertus, personatum ecclesiæ de Styvelyngflete, nostræ diocæseos, de licentia Domini Regis et aliorum consensu, cujus consensus requirebatur in hac parte, prædictis hospitali et Magistro assignavit pariter et donavit :

Attendentes etiam humilem supplicationem ejusdem Magistri Roberti, Decani, pro approprianda dicta ecclesia nobis facta, et subjectiones Domini Ricardi de Grymmestone, rectoris tunc dictæ ecclesiæ, ac Domini Hugonis Walsham, magistri dicti hospitalis, præfatæ ecclesiæ patroni, quas acceptamus et admisimus, ad utilitatem nostræ Eboracensis ecclesiæ et divini cultus augmentum, pauperum insuper et egenorum sustentationem, necnon manifestam et notoriam paupertatem dicti hospitalis, quodque aliter subsistere non poterit, nec dicti capellani sustentari poterunt in eodem, nisi per appropriationem dictæ ecclesiæ, et aliunde, eis solertius sit provisum ; eodemque Domino Ricardo de Grymmeston postmodum dictam ecclesiam dimittente, et sponte, pure, simpliciter et absolute in manibus nostris resignante, ac dimissionem et resignationem hujusmodi per nos acceptas pariter et admissas :

Nos, Willelmus, Archiepiscopus prædictus, invocata Spiritus Sancti gratia, de consensu dilectorum filiorum Decani et capituli nostræ Eboracensis ecclesiæ, frequenti solempni et diligenti super hoc tractatu præhibito cum eisdem, ac concurrentibus omnibus et singulis quæ in casu hujusmodi requiruntur, memoratam ecclesiam de Styvelyngflete, ex causis præmissis, cum suis fructibus redditibus et proventibus ac pertinentiis universis, præter portionem vicarii inferius per nos taxandam, Magistro Hospitalis prædicti et suis successoribus concedimus, assignamus, deputamus et donamus ad sustentationem magistri, capellanorum celebratorum, et aliorum sex capellanorum senium et valetudinariorum in eodem, ac ad supportandum alia onera infrascripta, in usus proprios habendos et in perpetuis temporibus possidendos.

Ordinamus insuper decernentes quod in dicta ecclesia de Stillingflete sit perpetuus Vicarius, qui in ea residere personaliter teneatur, curamque gerat animarum, et faciat honeste ecclesiæ deserviri, necnon loci Archidiacono procuracionem ratione visitationis debitam, et synodalia solvere teneatur. Quilibet vicarius et successores sui habeant ad inhabitandum mansum juxta ecclesiam prædictam in boreali parte situm, ubi vicarii ante consolidationem vicariæ cum rectoria antiquitus habitabant. Item habeant unam dimidiam bovatom terræ de terra ecclesiæ unacum prato, et omnimodis commoditatibus et aisiamentis, pasturis, pascuis, moris, silvis et ceteris quibuscumque locis ad dictam dimidiam bovatom terræ pertinentibus quoquo modo, et totum alteragium, præter decimam feni et lanæ; quibus vicarius qui pro tempore fuerit nomine portionis et pro portione sua contentus existat. Cujus vicarii præsentatio ad Magistrum prædicti hospitalis et suos successores, admissio et institutio ad Nos et successores nostros sede plena, et ad Decanum ecclesiæ nostræ Eboracensis prædictæ, sede vacante, pertineant in futurum. Et quia dictus Dominus Ricardus rector extitit, tenuit et habuit statum honestum, ne, in obprobrium cleri et oblocutionem plurium, victum et vestitum non habeat competenter, Nos, ad liberam resignationem ejusdem, pro utilitate nostræ Eboracensis ecclesiæ ac cultu divino in eadem et hospitali prædicto augmentando, nostrum intuitum dirigentes ordinamus et decrevimus ordinando quod de Magistro dicti hospitalis et suis successoribus, necnon ab hospitali prædicto, singulis annis usque ad finem vitæ suæ percipiat xxvj^{li} xiii^s iiiij^d sterlingorum ad duos anni terminos in hospitali prædicto ad festa Sancti Martini in Yeme, et Pentecosten per æquales portiones; et sic de anno in annum usque ad terminum vitæ suæ.

Quas quidem decem libras idem Subthesaurarius duobus Capellanis, non vicariis, qui nominabuntur personæ, divina in ipsa nostra Eboracensi ecclesia, uni videlicet pro nobis et successoribus nostris, alteri vero pro prædictis Magistris Roberto et Willelmo et aliis superius nominatis celebraturis imperpetuum, secundum formam ordinationis nostræ super hoc in posterum faciendæ fideliter solvere teneantur.

Et nichilominus præfatum Magistrum dicti hospitalis præsentem, volentem et ad hæc omnia consentientem, pro se et successoribus suis solvendo dictas pecuniarum summas et earum quamlibet, locis et terminis [ad] solutionem earum superius assignatis, sub pœna excommunicationis majoris in Magistrum et successores suos et suspensionis ipsius hospitalis tenore præsentium condemnamus.

Quas quidem sententias in ipsos Magistros et suos successores, et hospitale, canonica monitione præmissa, proferimus in hiis scriptis, et eas incurrere volumus ipso facto, si quinto decimo die post aliquem terminum secundum vel infra non solutionem fecerint in ipso termino ut præmittitur faciendam ; quodque Magister, qui sit in solutione, cessaverit, tanquam perjurus et inhabilis, a dicto hospitali et omni jure sibi competenti in eodem ipso facto penitus sit privatus, fructus et proventus omnes et singuli prædictæ ecclesiæ de Styvelyngfleete ad ipsum hospitale spectantes sint ipso facto, et donec congrue satisfactum sit, remaneant sequestrati.

Et ne super sustentatione sex pauperum capellanorum inter Magistrum et suos ministros, ex parte una, et ceteros pauperes sacerdotes ex altera, dissensionis vel quæstionis materia oriatur, victum, vestitum et calciamenta determinavimus, in modum qui sequitur, Decernendo similiter quod quilibet ipsorum capellanorum habeat singulis annis per quamlibet septimanam pro victu suo xij^d, vel tantum valorem in esculentis et poculentis; et quolibet anno indumenta necessaria pro corpore suo valoris vj^s viij^d, vel tantam pecuniam pro eisdem.

Beati Petri Eboraci, et ejusdem ecclesiæ Capitulum, Salutem in auctore salutis.

It is a pious work to keep devilish men out of the cathedral fold ; which will be best done by a good grammar school followed by study of theology :

welcoming Cardinal Pole's recent decree in the Westminster synod for free education of a certain number of boys of every cathedral church ; found school in Horsefair Hospital for 50 boys, a master, and usher, or as many as revenues allow.

Inter cetera pietatis studia quibus nos urgere convenit, hoc præcipuæ æstimationis et in primis exoptandum, quo Christiana religio propagetur, et quo in ecclesia militanti tales in pastores ubique præficiantur qui rapaces lupos, hoc est viros diabolicos et de fide catholica male sapientes, gladio spirituali, id est verbo Dei, ab ovilibus ovium sibi creditis arcere valeant et fugare : Id quod facilius fieri speramus si lasciva et ignara juvenus, strictis habenis, ludimagistrorum opera coercita, et tam literis et doctrina quam morum integritate exercita, postmodum in sacrarum et canonicarum literarum latum campum progrediatur, et docta evadat ; hinc est quod nos, Decanus et Capitulum antedicti, laudatissimum, et omnium calculo probatissimum, decretum Reverendissimi in Christo Patris et domini Domini Reginaldi, miseratione divina titulo Sanctæ Mariæ in Cosmedin sacrosanctæ Romanæ ecclesiæ presbiteri cardinalis, Cantuariensis Archiepiscopi, Poli nuncupati, sanctissimi domini nostri Papæ et sedis apostolicæ ad serenissimos Philippum et Mariam Angliæ reges et universum Angliæ regnum de latere legati, in sacrosancta synodo generali Westmonasterii nuper celebrata editum et publicatum, gratis animis expostulantes In qua singulis hujus regni Angliæ metropolitanis et cathedralibus ecclesiis certum puerorum numerum pro cujusque provinciæ et dioceseos magnitudine ali et gratis edoceri sit sancitum, volentes quanta possimus maturitate hujusmodi decretum in ecclesia nostra cathedrali et metropolitana quantum in nobis est feliciter auspicari, SCOLAM GRAMMATICALEM DE QUINQUAGINTA PUERORUM NUMERO, si redditus hujusmodi scolæ ad hoc sufficiant, per ludimagistrum et hipodidasculum infra domum nostram, nuper vocatam hospitale Beatæ Mariæ extra Bothome barre civitatis Eboraci, vulgariter dictum the Horse fayre, docendam et erudiendam ; alioquin de tali et tanto numero scolarium qualis et quantus ex dictæ domus redditibus et aliis proventibus eidem scolæ nunc datis collatis et applicatis, seu imposterum dandis conferendis et applicandis, de tempore in tempus quoquomodo exhiberi poterit et sustentari, fundandam erigendam et stabiliendam fore decrevimus ; ac tempore præsentium, de et cum licencia et auctoritate dictorum serenissimorum principum Philippi et Mariæ, Angliæ regum, nobis ad hoc specialiter per eorum literas patentes sigillo suo magno sub dato xiii diei Martii annis regnorum suorum tertio et quarto sigillatas concessis, FUNDAMUS ET STABILIMUS.

Proctor for dean
and chapter
prays execution of the legatine letter.

Idemque Magister Johannes Shilito, procurator hujusmodi, petit quatinus omnes executiones earum literarum in nos assumeremus, et juxta formam earundem procedere dignaremur. Quibus literis publice in judicio lectis, nos ob reverentiam et honorem dicti Reverendissimi patris domini Cardinalis et Legati, omnes executiones literarum hujusmodi ad petitionem dicti procuratoris in nos assumentes decrevimus procedendum fore tunc ibidem juxta formam effectum et tenorem literarum, prius Willelmum Ambrose in scribam nostrum assumentes.

The dean and chapter's case
stated.

Quo facto, dictus procurator ad informationem nostram, sic asseruit, et in hac parte allegavit, viva voce, quod hospitale Sanctæ Mariæ extra Bothome-barre civitatis Eboraci, vulgariter nuncupatum the Horse fayre, ex ipsius prima fundatione unum magistrum et duos capellanos in eodem celebraturos, unum etiam clericum, et sex capellanos alios, senes et valetudinarios, celebrare non valentes, infra dictum hospitale moraturos haberet, et eis victum et vestitum competenter alimentaret et sustineret; et, quod, superiorum magistrorum suorum ejusdem hospitalis incuria et negligentia, eo devenum est omnes fructus et proventus ad dictum hospitale nunc pertinentes, prout in præsentī dimittuntur et locantur, ad onera prædicta supportanda et ferenda minus sufficientes existunt, sed nimium exiles; allegans etiam, ipsum hospitale in suis structuris et ædificiis adeo fuisse ruinosum et esse in præsentī, quod ad omnes presbiteros ibidem honeste hospitandos et sustentandos loca infra dictum hospitale non sufficerent. Quo factum est, ut multi presbiteri dicti hospitalis consocii, extra hospitale propter cubiculorum suorum notoriam ruinam et decasum, ultra memoriam hominum, ad inhabitandum necessario sunt coacti; Quocirca serenissimi principes Philippus et Maria, Angliæ reges, de præmissis debite certificati, volentes dictum hospitale et omnes ipsius terras et possessiones in meliorem usum converti et commutari, licentiam suam per eorum literas patentes sunt impartiti quatinus Magister Robertus, tunc dicti hospitalis magister, et socii ipsius hospitalis, hujusmodi hospitale, cum consensu patronorum ejusdem, Decano et Capitulo ecclesiæ cathedralis Sancti Petri prædictæ, ad usum scolæ grammaticalis per eosdem Decanum et Capitulum infra vel prope civitatem Eboraci fundandæ et erigendæ darent concederent et confirmarent. Qui quidem magister et socii licentia prædicta freti præfatum hospitale, de et cum ratificatione et confirmatione patronorum ejusdem, antedictis Decano et Capitulo in domo sua capitulari per eorum chartam desuper factam et sigillo eorum communi sigillatam dederunt et concesserunt ac confirmaverunt. Et quod, post præmissa, Decanus et Capitulum prædicti, auctoritate eis per præfatos serenissimos principes attributa, scolam grammaticalem de certo numero scolarium infra hospitale nutriendorum et alimentandorum, de facto erexerunt fundaverunt et stabiliverunt, quæ omnia et singula vera publica notoria manifesta famosa fuisse et esse asseruit. Quare, doctus de præmissis, dictus procurator petit hospitalitatem, si qua fuerat, in hospitali prædicto, ac omnia ab ea dependentia in dicto hospitali, per nos suppressi et extinguui; et ipsum hospitale cum annexis ac omnibus juribus et pertinentiis suis, privilegiis quoque et indultis ac aliis quibuscunque eisdem concessis, pro perpetuo usu scolarium in dicta scola grammaticalis nutriendorum et erudiendorum, præfatis Decano et Capitulo et eorum mensæ capitulari etiam per nos, auctoritate dicti Reverendissimi patris domini Domini Cardinalis et legati, uniri applicari appropriari annecti et incorporari, ceteraque fieri in hac parte quæ justa fuerint et æquitati consona.

Deinde nos Johannes Dakyn, Vicarius in spiritualibus Generalis antedictus, volentes prædictæ allegationis veritatem saltem summarie cognoscere, assignavimus dicto procuratori ad præmissa omnia et singula per eum judicialiter allegata statim probandum. Et incontinenter procurator prædictus produxit Richardum Thickpoine, Johannem Nicholson, Nicolaum Calome, Willelmum Yates, et Johannem Flaxton in testes; quos ad ejus petitionem oneravimus jurato, ac de et super præmissis diligenter examinavimus. Qui testes sic jurati, et publice ibidem examinati, dixerunt et deposuerunt, quod bene noverunt Thomam Mercer et Johannem Goldinge dudum dicti hospitalis successive magistros, necnon Dominos Willelmum Hayton et Thomam Layther, nunc, ut asseruerunt, dicti hospitalis socios et confratres, ac Dominos Ricardum Coltam et Walterum Lancastere nuper dicti hospitalis etiam socios et confratres, qui omnes continuo extra hospitale hujusmodi pernoctabant cubabant, et jacebant, nec aliquo tempore, in quantum unquam audirent, hospitalem mensam vel aliquam larem aut domicilium ibidem fovebant; præterea dixerunt et deposuerunt, virtute juramenti sui, se quantum viserint et sciverint, ut eidem hospitali vicini, nunquam vidisse aliquem clericum aut aliquos pauperes presbiteros hospitatos alimentatos aut sustentatos in eodem, sed quod jam nuper cameras, in quibus duo presbyteri socii et alii pauperes presbyteri dicti hospitalis solebant, ut asseruerunt, jacere et cubare valde ruinosas et ad solum usque prope dirutas, adeo quod sine magnis expensis de facili reparari nequeunt, ut asseruerunt; credunt etiam quod omnes fructus et proventus dicti hospitalis, prout nunc, ut audiverunt dici, ad longum tempus locantur et dimittuntur, non sufficiunt sustentationi magistri, sociorum et aliorum sex presbiterorum prædictorum, et ad reparationes et alia onera faciendum. Dixerunt præterea, quod dictum hospitale, toto tempore memoriæ eorundem continuo, vacuum remansit quoad residentiam magistri sociorum vel pauperum presbiterorum prædictorum, dixerunt tamen quod Dominus Thomas, nunc Dominus Wharton, et Dominus Thomas Curwen, miles, et alii laici ipsum hospitale aliquando a magistro ejusdem pro tempore existente conduxerunt, et in eodem tanquam firmarii certis temporibus ad eorum cubitum inhabitaverunt, et non aliter. Qua examinatione sic facta, procurator antedictus ad probandum reliquam partem allegationis suæ prædictæ exhibuit quemdam antiquum librum in registro dicti Reverendissimi patris Eboracensis Archiepiscopi remanere solitum, primam dicti hospitalis foundationem continentem. In quo, per inspectionem et lecturam ejusdem in judicio factam, nobis constabat Reverendissimum patrem Willelmum olim Eboracensem Archiepiscopum, inter cetera ordinasse, ut duo capellani probi et idonei in dicto hospitali cum magistro ejusdem perpetuo morarentur, et divina celebrarent imperpetuum; et quod in eodem hospitali essent sex capellani alii, senes et valetudinarii, celebrare non valentes, qui in eodem hospitali perpetuo sustinerentur. Exhibuit etiam literas licentiæ dictorum dominorum Regis et Reginæ prædictis Decano et capitulo concessas, et alias literas sub sigillo communi dictorum Magistri Roberti Johnson et sociorum dicti hospitalis, ac etiam sigillis Willelmi domini Eure, Thomæ Eglesfield, et Edwardi Marshall, patronorum dicti hospitalis, ut apparuit, sigillatas et subscriptas, erectionem dictæ scolæ et patronorum hujusmodi consensum continentes. Quibus respective visis et inspectis, nobis evidenter apparuit præfatos dominos Regem et Reginam licentiam Magistro Roberto Johnson et sociis hujusmodi ac patronis dicti hospitalis superius specificatis attribuisse, quatinus ipsum dictum hospitale Decano et Capitulo prædictis concederent, prout revera concesserint, et dictos Decanum et Capitulum de facto scolam grammaticalem in eodem hospitali juxta licentiam regiam prædictam erexisse, fundasse, et stabilisse.

Quibus omnibus et singulis præmissis diligenter per nos, de consilio jurisperitorum cum quibus communicavimus in hac parte, consideratis et ponderatis, Nos ad petitionem procuratoris antedicti, sententiam, sive decretum nostrum finale, in hac parte tulimus et promulgavimus in scriptis, sub eo, qui sequitur, tenore verborum.

In Dei nomine, Amen. ^a The grant in this form, which is the common form for suppressed monasteries or chauntries, was either used in ignorance, as the hospital never had come to the Crown at all, but being an ecclesiastical foundation it was wrongly assumed that it had; or, ex abundanti cautela, to found the title on a direct Crown grant. Probably it was a mistake.

LICENCE IN MORTMAIN FOR PURCHASE OF PRESENT SCHOOL SITE.

18 Oct.

VICTORIA, by the Grace of God of the United Kingdom, of Great Britain and Ireland, Queen, Defender of the Faith, To all to whom these presents shall come Greeting.

Whereas the Dean and Chapter of the Cathedral and Metropolitan Church of Saint Peter of York in Chapter assembled, have by their Petition humbly represented unto us That their late Most Gracious Majesties Philip and Mary King and Queen of England by their Royal Licence or Letters Patent, tested at Greenwich, the fourteenth day of March in the third and fourth years of their Reign and in the year of our Lord one thousand five hundred and fifty-seven, after granting to the Master and Fellows of a certain Hospital therein mentioned, power to convey, and to the said Dean and Chapter power to receive and hold to them and their successors the said Hospital and its Lands, Tenements and appurtenances to the use of a Grammar School, then proposed to be founded by the said Dean and Chapter, did amongst other things for themselves and their successors, grant and give Licence unto the said Dean and Chapter that they might erect, found and establish a Grammar School within or near the City of York, in such fit place as to the same Dean and Chapter should seem best, for the education of boys and youths of the realm in the knowledge of letters and integrity of manners, with certain powers to appoint Masters and others in the same School, and at the beginning to make and ordain (so far as they did so by and with the licence, authority and approbation of the Right Reverend Father in Christ the Archbishop of York for the time being) ordinances, statutes and rules for the management and government as well of the said Grammar School Master and others as of the lands, tenements, possessions and profits thereof and such ordinances, statutes and rules so often as it should be needful, and to them the said Dean and Chapter should thereafter seem expedient, with the licence, authority and approbation of the said Right Reverend Father to change, alter and reform and to add to the same or to take from the same for ever

And their said Majesties did thereby grant that the same Grammar School should be called the School of the Cathedral Church of the Blessed Saint Peter of York, and that the Ministers and Scholars of the said School might be better maintained and the charges of the same more easily supported, their said Majesties did grant and give licence for them and their successors aforesaid unto the same Dean and Chapter and their successors to purchase, buy and receive any Manors, Lands and tenements, oblations, tithes, advowsons of Churches, rents, reversions, services and other hereditaments whatsoever, as well of their said Majesties, their heirs and successors aforesaid as of any other person or persons whomsoever, according to the provisions of the Statute passed in the first and second years of their said Majesties' reign for applying lands to pious purposes within twenty years, and such and the same Manors, Lands, Tenements, and other the premises to have and hold unto the aforesaid Dean and Chapter and their successors for the maintenance and support of the aforesaid school, and the charge of the same for ever; the Statute concerning lands and tenements not to be put in Mortmain or any other Statute, Act, ordinance, provision or restriction passed, made, ordained or provided to the contrary thereof notwithstanding

That shortly after the granting of the said Licence, the then Dean and Chapter of York founded the said school, and the same hath ever since existed, and is still continued under the management and government of the Petitioners, and the grant of the lands and tenements of the said Hospital for the use of the said School was subsequently confirmed to the Petitioners by the Royal Licence or Letters Patent of his late Majesty King James the First, tested at Westminster, the nineteenth day of July in the nineteenth year of his reign

That some time since a School called the Proprietary School was erected and established near the said City of York on certain freehold and copyhold hereditaments, purchased as a site for the same, and vested in certain trustees, And that proposals have lately been made to the Petitioners to sell them the said Proprietary School, and other property held therewith, for the use of the said School called Saint Peter's School

That by an Act of Parliament, passed in the seventh and eighth years of the reign of his late Majesty King William the Third, intituled "An Act for the encouragement of Charitable gifts and Dispositions," it was enacted that it should be lawful for his then most gracious Majesty, and for his heirs and successors, when and as often and in such cases as his Majesty his heirs and successors should think fit, to grant to any Bodies, Politic or Corporate, their heirs and successors, licence to alien in Mortmain, and also to purchase, acquire, take and hold in Mortmain in perpetuity, or otherwise, any Lands, tenements, rents or hereditaments whatsoever, of whomsoever the same should be holden

That the Petitioners are advised that, though the intent and meaning of their said above in part recited Licence of their late Majesties Philip and Mary evidently was, that the Petitioners should have full power to purchase and hold in Mortmain any Lands and Tenements whatsoever, for the use and benefit of the said School of Saint Peter of York, yet that the same is not sufficient to meet the requisitions of the said last above mentioned Act of Parliament

That the said Proprietary School House and the property occupied therewith, is much more eligibly situate than the School House and Buildings at present used for Saint Peter's School, and the Petitioners are of opinion that the acceptance of the said proposal is highly desirable

That the Petitioners are desirous of acquiring the right to purchase, take and hold the said Proprietary School House, and the other property held or enjoyed therewith, and also any other Lands, tenements and hereditaments whatsoever (not exceeding altogether the annual value hereinafter mentioned) which the Petitioners may hereafter consider desirable to purchase and hold for the use and benefit of the said School of Saint Peter of York

And the Petitioners are also desirous of having the powers given to them, in and by the said first-mentioned Licence or Letters Patent, to make statutes and rules for the management and government of their lands, tenements, possessions and the profits thereof, more explicitly defined and explained, so that it may clearly appear that the Petitioners have power with such Licence and authority, as in the said first-mentioned Letters Patent is required, to grant Building or other Leases, and to sell, alien and dispose of the lands, tenements and hereditaments so to be purchased, as also of the lands, tenements and hereditaments already vested in the Petitioners, for the use of the said School called Saint Peter's School, or any part or parts thereof, as to the Petitioners and their successors may seem meet and most for the welfare, support and benefit of the same School

And inasmuch as the funds at the disposition of the said Petitioners are at present insufficient to enable them to complete the purchase of the aforesaid School House, and other property held therewith, they are desirous to have power to mortgage or charge the same for the purpose of raising such part of the purchase money thereof as to the Petitioners shall seem expedient

The Petitioners therefore most humbly prayed that we will be graciously pleased to grant to the Petitioners our Royal Letters Patent, authorizing them to purchase and take the said Proprietary School House, and other property and hereditaments held or enjoyed therewith, and also any other lands, Manors, tenements, oblations, tithes, advowsons of Churches, rents, reversions, services and other hereditaments whatsoever (not exceeding altogether the annual value hereinafter mentioned) and the same to have and hold to the Petitioners and their successors, for the maintenance and support of the aforesaid School of Saint Peter of York, and the charges of the same for ever, and the same Lands and tenements, and also the lands and tenements, already held by the Petitioners for the use of the same school, or any part or parts thereof, by and with the licence, authority and approbation of the said Right Reverend Father the Lord Archbishop of York for the time being to be for that purpose first had and obtained, to demise, lease, sell and dispose of, as to the Petitioners and their successors may from time to time seem best, and most conducive for the welfare, support and maintenance of the same School and the Ministers thereof for the time being, and that we will also grant to the said Petitioners power to mortgage or charge the said Proprietary School House, and other property held therewith, for the purpose of raising part of the purchase money thereof

We taking the premises into our Royal consideration are graciously pleased to comply with the request of the said Petitioners in manner hereinafter mentioned.

Know ye therefore that we of our especial grace, certain knowledge and mere motion Have given and granted, and by these presents for us, our heirs and successors Do give and grant unto the said Dean and Chapter of the Cathedral and Metropolitan Church of Saint Peter of York and their successors, our especial Licence, full power and lawful and absolute authority to purchase and acquire the said Proprietary School House, and the Freehold and Copyhold hereditaments and other property held or enjoyed therewith, and to mortgage and charge the same for the purpose of raising, paying and securing such part of the purchase money thereof, as to the said Dean and Chapter shall seem expedient, and also (subject to the limitation hereinafter contained) to purchase and acquire any other lands, buildings, hereditaments and possessions whatsoever situate within the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and the same Proprietary School House, Freehold and Copyhold hereditaments and other property, and also such other Lands, Buildings, hereditaments and possessions together with the Lands, tenements and other hereditaments already held by them, To have and to hold in Mortmain unto the said Dean and Chapter of the Cathedral and Metropolitan Church of Saint Peter of York and their successors, for the maintenance and support of the aforesaid School of Saint Peter of York, and the charges of the same for ever And the same lands and tenements and also the lands and tenements already held by the said Dean and Chapter, for the use of the same School, or any part or parts thereof, by and with the licence, authority and approbation of the said Right Reverend Father, the Lord Archbishop of York for the time being, to be for that purpose first had and obtained, to demise, lease, sell and dispose of as to the said Dean and Chapter and their successors may from time to time seem best, and most conducive for the welfare support and maintenance of the same school and the Ministers thereof for the time being

And we do further for us, our heirs and successors, give and grant unto the said Dean and Chapter of the Cathedral and Metropolitan Church of Saint Peter of York, our special Licence, full power and lawful and absolute authority in case of the sale and alienation by the said Dean and Chapter or their successors, in manner aforesaid, of the same lands and tenements, or any part or parts thereof, respectively to purchase, acquire, take and hold in Mortmain in perpetuity for the use and benefit of the said school, any other lands, tenements and hereditaments, And, subject to such limitation as aforesaid,

We do by these presents for us, our heirs and successors, give and grant unto all and every person and persons, Bodies, Politic and Corporate, otherwise competent, our especial Licence, full power and lawful and absolute authority to grant, bargain, sell, alien, convey and dispose of in Mortmain in fee and perpetuity, or otherwise, unto the said Dean and Chapter of the Cathedral and Metropolitan Church of Saint Peter of York and their successors, for the maintenance and support of the aforesaid School of Saint Peter of York, any Lands, Tenements and other hereditaments, and likewise in case of such sale and alienation by the said Dean and Chapter of the Cathedral and Metropolitan Church of Saint Peter of York or their successors, as hereinbefore mentioned, to grant, bargain, sell, alien, convey and dispose of in Mortmain unto the said Dean and Chapter and their successors in fee and perpetuity, or otherwise, for the maintenance and support of the aforesaid School, any other Lands, tenements, and hereditaments.

Provided nevertheless, and these presents and the Licence and authority hereby granted, are upon this express condition, that all and every the Lands, tenements and hereditaments of the said School of Saint Peter of York shall not at any time exceed the clear annual value of Three Thousand Pounds.

And lastly, We do by these presents for us, our heirs and successors, grant unto the said Dean and Chapter of the Cathedral and Metropolitan Church of Saint Peter of York and their successors, That these our Letters Patent or the Inrolment or Exemplification thereof, shall be in and by all things, firm, valid, sufficient and effectual in the Law, according to the true intent and meaning thereof, notwithstanding the not fully or truly naming or describing the said Lands tenements and hereditaments or any of them, or any part thereof, or any other omission, imperfection, defect, matter, cause or thing whatsoever to the contrary thereof, in any wise notwithstanding.

In witness whereof we have caused these our Letters to be made Patent. Witness ourself at our Palace at Westminster this seventeenth day of October in the eighth year of our Reign.

By Writ of Privy Seal, EDMUNDS.

Com̄mota sunt statim paternæ pietatis viscera super contritione pœnitentis et veniam postulantis filii, et pie pulsantis ægroti vulnera verus animarum et corporum medicus oleo misericordiæ refocillare non distulit. Finitis itaque precibus et singultibus lachrymosis, cum ab oratione surrexisset, mirabile dictu! a languoribus et dæmoniacæ deceptionis, quibus opprimebatur, laqueis dissolutus: nulla in medium mora, Divinum sensit juvamen, et totius molestiæ diu perpersæpium et efficax allevamen. Propulsa etenim utriusque hominis qua detinebatur mœstitia, spiritualis et lætabunda subsecuta est exhilaratio; æstus quoque cordis letiferi, misericordis medicinæ rore salutifero perfusi penitus consumuntur. Convaluit ægrotus, de cælo suscepta medela, sanctissimi Johannis solita subveniente gratia: lætatur et exultat homo, pristinæ jam redditus sospitati, qui paulo ante moribundus, omnem recuperandæ salutis utriusque spem amiserat. Refriguit mox calor pestilens, a spiritu fornicationis et immunditiæ circa vitalia succensus; mundato per compunctionis lachrymas cordis domicilio, quasi a gravi somno languentis reviviscit animus, Divinæ visitationis lumine perlustratus, ac salutifera Sancti Spiritus invocatione delibutus. Mirabantur qui aderant tam subitæ meliorationis medelam; ignorantes quod in tribulatione sua Deum invocaverat, Qui eum in contritione cordis humiliati de templo sancto Suo exaudierit, et laqueo mortis præoccupatum, per mirifici pontificis merita, potenter eripuerit.

QUONIAM de ministracione refectorii, propter incuriam et negligentiam ministrorum, sæpe inter Præpositum et Canonicos querela oriebatur, placuit Archiepiscopo et Præposito et ipsis Canonicis personaliter congregatis, ut ordo sessionis et ministracio procurationis, quæ minus antea videbatur ordinata, taliter deinceps inperpetuum ordinetur; ita tamen ne presenti institutione prisca Canonicorum dignitas in aliquo minuaretur, set salva in omnibus eorum consuetudine, licentia, et potestate, auctoritas eorum per omnia intus et extra inconcussa permaneat.

Erit itaque inter ipsos in refectorio ordo sessionis secundum ordinem successionis, scilicet ut circa Præpositum, ibi sit sedes Canonici ubi fuit locus antecessoris. Similiter et inter Vicarios eorum, ibi erit locus successoris ubi fuit sedes sui predecessoris.

THE SCHOOLMASTER'S PORTION IN HALL.

[A Clerical Strike at Beverley Minster, by A. F. Leach.
Archæologia, lv. 1-20, 1895.]

Order for the Ministration of the Refectory in the Bedern.

SINCE by reason of the carelessness and negligence of the servants complaints have oftentimes arisen between the Provost and Canons as to the service in the Dining Hall, the Archbishop and Provost and the Canons themselves, in person assembled, have determined that the order of sitting and the service of provisions, which seemed in former times to have been left without ordinance, shall henceforth for ever be ordered as follows: provided, however, that the ancient dignity of the Canons shall be in no wise lessened by the present constitution; but, saving in all things their custom, licence, and power, their authority in all things within and without shall remain unshaken.

The order of sitting in the Refectory shall, therefore, be between them according to the order of succession; to wit, that, round the Provost, the seat of each Canon shall be where the place of his predecessor was; and in like manner, among the Vicars, the place of the successor shall be where the seat of his predecessor was.

On week-days, not being festivals, that is, on Monday, Tuesday, and Thursday, if it shall be flesh time, they shall have four general dishes at dinner, honest both in quantity and quality. Of these, the first shall be according to the season, either pork or beef, and this not without vegetables, either beans or peas or cabbage; the second, either fresh mutton or fresh pork; the third, either chicken, or goose, or game; the fourth, any kind of soft meat, either mince, or brawn, or rissoles, or some other thing of the same kind convenient and honest. At supper two large dishes of meat, the one boiled, the other roast; but if meat cannot be got, the one of meat, the other of cheese or eggs, or else of fish.

On Wednesday, Friday, and on Saturday, at tierce, the first dish shall be of vegetables; afterwards three general dishes of fish; but if fish cannot be got, its place shall be supplied by something honest and convenient. At supper, two large dishes of fish, or if necessity shall require, other things which are honest and convenient. But if Ember days shall fall on these three days, or if lectionum, sicut est a Pascha usque Pentecosten, vel ix lectionum, ad tertiam, quartum addetur ferculum quod sit mollis cibi, sicut supradictum est. Si autem quarta vel vj^a feria, vel Sabbato, hujusmodi festum evenerit, similiter hujusmodi addetur ferculum. Quæ fercula tam carnis quam piscis secundum quod debent vel piperato vel cuminato, vel aliquo alio sapido condiantur condimento. In majoribus vero festis quando Invitatorium a quatuor cantatur, et responsorium a binis et trinis, sicut ipsum Festum celebratius agitur quam communia festa, ita in ipso festo, et prandium et cœna plenius solita suppleantur; sane quatuor diebus Natalis Domini, et die Circumcisionis, et Epiphaniæ, et Purificationis Beatæ Mariæ, et iiij diebus Paschæ, et die Ascensionis et iiij^{or} diebus Pentecostes, die festi Sancti Johannis^a in maio, et die Sancti Johannis Baptistæ, et die Apostolorum Petri et Pauli, et die Assumptionis Beatæ Mariæ, et solempnitate Omnium Sanctorum. Sicut isti dies festivius et solempnius in ecclesia celebrantur, ita in refectorio festivius honorabuntur; videlicet in seminellis, vel vastellis, et variis intermissis.

Hoc modo ministrabitur in refectorio, excepto Adventu Domini, et Quadragesima, in quibus et pro continuatione jejunii, et pro augmento servitii augebitur ministratio Refectorii, sicut est in pultribus et diversis pietanciis, quemadmodum pro oportunitate temporis haberi poterit.

Vicars' messes, Erit vero eadem qualitas et quantitas panis et servisiæ, et numerus ferculorum, Canonicis et Vicariis suis, excepto quod ipsi Canonici singulariter et sibi prandebunt et cœnabunt, Vicarii vero bini et trini. Quod si Canonicus in absence. refectorio non fuerit, ubicunque sit, plenarium corrodium habebit. Similiter et Vicarius, si interveniente aliqua necessaria causa vel honesta defuerit, quæ tamen causa vel ad ecclesiam vel ad Canonicum pertinet, habebit plene corrodium suum.

Provision after bleeding.

Si vero Canonicus vel Vicarius minutus fuerit, convenienter eis et de pane et de cervisia, secundum personam suam ter in die serviatur. Habebit etiam ad matutinas panem et cervisiam, et de coquina unum ferculum vel carnis vel piscis, secundum quod diei qualitas in se habuerit: ad tertiam et ad vesperam sicut alio tempore constitutum est. Si autem infirmus fuerit, nihil omnino ei de corrodio suo subtrahatur.

Quia vero procuratio omnis domus per ministrorum dilithere shall be any vigil, or in any other way it shall be a fast-day, a fifth dish shall be added because of the fast.

On Sundays and common festivals, or those of three lessons, as it is from Easter unto Pentecost, or of nine lessons, at tierce a fourth dish shall be added, which shall be of soft meat as aforesaid. But if such feast shall fall on Wednesday, Friday, or Saturday, a dish shall be added in like manner. These dishes, as well of meat as of fish, shall be seasoned as they ought to be, either with pepper or with cummin, or other savoury sauce.

On the greater feasts, when the invitatory is sung by four, and the respond by two or three, as the feast itself is more solemnly performed than common feasts, so on the said feast both dinner and supper shall be supplied more fully than usual, viz., on the four days of the Nativity of our Lord, the day of Circumcision, the Epiphany, and the Purification of the Blessed Mary, the four days of Easter, Ascension Day, and the four days of Pentecost, and the day of the feast of St. John in May, and St. John the Baptist's day, and the day of the Apostles Peter and Paul, and the day of the Assumption of the Blessed Mary, and the Solemnity of All Saints. As these days are celebrated more festively and solemnly in the Church, so in the Refectory shall they be more festively honoured, viz., in simnel or in wastel, and in various entrées.

In this manner the service of the Refectory shall be conducted throughout the whole year, the Advent of our Lord and Lent excepted; in which, both for the continuation of fasting and for the increase of the service, the service of the Refectory shall be enlarged, as in pulse and other pittance such as can be obtained according to the season.

There shall be the same quantity and quality of bread and ale and number of dishes for the Canons and their Vicars, except that the said Canons shall dine and sup singly and alone, the Vicars by twos and threes. But if a Canon shall not be in the Refectory he shall have his full corrody wherever he shall be. So also shall a Vicar have his full corrody if he shall be absent for any necessary or honest cause, which cause shall concern either the Church or a Canon. And if a Canon or Vicar has been bled, he shall be served according to his quality both with bread and ale three times a day. Also he shall have at breakfast bread and beer, and from the kitchen one dish either of flesh or fish, according as the usage of the day shall be; at tierce and at supper as heretofore ordained. But if he shall be ill nothing shall be taken from his corrody.

gentiam melioratur, et per eorum nequiciam pejoratur, eligat Præpositus honestos et diligentes ministros, et eos assensu Canonicorum in ministeriis præficiat. Qui, si in ministerio quocunque, negligentes fuerint, et conventi et castigati incorrigibiles extiterint, communi consilio amoveantur, et pro eis meliores substituantur.

The 7 poor.

Placuit etiam de septem pauperibus, qui pro vij Canonicis in refectorio suo corrodium suum habent in elemosina, ut ad terciam duo fercula habeant, et unum ad vesperam, et ut unusquisque Canonicus sciat quis de illis septem ad se pertineat. Qui pauper cum obierit, ne ipse Canonicus ad quem pauper pertinere videbatur, aliquid precipitanter vel usurpanter de altero substituendo moliatur, placuit ut prius communi consideratione Præpositi et Canonicorum alter substituatur, et tunc demum elemosinarius ipsius Canonici reputetur. Placuit etiam, ut si quis clericus, honeste se habens et ecclesiam frequentans, aliunde victum plene non habuerit, ad meliorandum servitium in ecclesia ipse in loco pauperis suscipiatur.

Schoolmaster to have same portion as Canons except that he shares with others.

Quicquid autem de corrodio Canonicorum dictum est, vel in refectorio vel extra, vel in minucione vel infirmitate, hoc idem per omnia servatur Custodi ecclesiæ, et Magistro Scholarum, excepto quod ipsi non singulariter comedent.

De quantitate vero panis, et mensura servisiæ, ideo hucusque tacitum est, quia necdum inter eos de pondere convenerat nec mensura, quæ communi dispositioni majoranda sunt et melioranda.

Number of persons to be served.

Sunt autem quibus hac institutione serviendum est, viij^o Canonici, Custos ecclesiæ, et Magister Scholarum, octo canonicorum Vicarii, et Vicarius Episcopi, cujus portio et merces non ad Archiepiscopum sed ad Canonicos communiter spectant, Præpositus Archiepiscopi. Numero viginti sunt. Et alii quibus, et si non adeo plene, tamen ex debito, serviendum est, et bene, clericus custodis, tintinnabulorum pulsator, et magister operis etc.

And inasmuch as the management of every house is bettered by the diligence of the servants, and by the negligence of the same is made worse, the Provost shall, with the assent of the Canons, appoint honest and diligent servants; who, if they shall be negligent in their service, and having been reprimanded and punished, shall remain incorrigible, shall be removed by common counsel, and better ones put in their place.

Also it was determined as to the seven poor men who for the seven Canons have their corrody in alms in the Refectory, that at tierce they shall have two dishes and one at supper. And that each Canon shall know which of the said seven belongs to himself. And when this poor man dies, lest the Canon to whom he seems to belong should attempt to rush or usurp anything in putting in another, it was determined that, as formerly, another shall be substituted by the common counsel of the Provost and Canons, and that he shall then be considered the almsman of the said Canon. Also it was determined that if any clerk of honest behaviour and assiduously serving the Church shall not have sufficient livelihood from another quarter, then, for the improvement of the service of the Church, he shall be received in the place of a poor man.

But whatever has been said concerning the corrody of the Canons either within the Refectory or without, either in blood-letting or in illness, the same fully applies to the Churchwarden and the Schoolmaster, except that they do not eat alone.

Concerning the quantity of bread and measure of ale nothing has hitherto been said, inasmuch as its weight and measure have not been agreed upon, but by common consent they are to be greater and better than formerly.

Now those who are to be served on this rule are eight Canons, the Churchwarden, and the Schoolmaster, eight Canons' Vicars, and the Vicar of the Archbishop (whose portion and wages are the business not of the Archbishop but of the Canons in common), the Provost of the Archbishop; in number twenty in all. There are others for whom provision must be made, if not so fully yet duly and well, viz.: the Clerk of the Churchwarden, the Bell-ringer, and the Master of the Works, etc.

J. of Risingdon,
Chapter's Assessor, to John of Nassington, Canon of Beverley.

As to the work of the Cooks in the Kitchen, nothing has been done since you were here, partly because of the Writ of Prohibition, partly because Master Alan (official of the Provost), though he did not order it, will not have it pulled down. The chamber is made a cave for the king's enemies, who though convicted and sentenced to imprisonment by the king's judges, are allowed to have big dinners in Hall, and to smoke out the Vicars-choral with great fires. Further at the instance of Geoffrey of Sancton, clerk, he has cited before him in a personal action Master 'l'omas of Brompton, rector of our school, wearing our choir habit and in due course entered on the roll for duty in reading and singing, and, though often required by me, refuses to dismiss him, though he will supersede proceedings till next Convocation of Canons. Moreover he is believed to have facto per cocos in coquina nostra, de quo satis audistis, nichil erat aliud actum quam fuit in præsentia vestra, tum propter prohibitionem capitulo per cocos porrectam, tum quia Magister Alanus dicti operis auctor erat et defensor, non quod illud fieri mandavit, sed quod illud prohibet et semper prohibuit demoliri.

Sed crescente dictorum cocorum et Alani malitia, illa camera facta erat inimicorum Domini Regis receptaculum et spelunca; Item idem Alanus, contra voluntatem Capituli ministrorumque ejus, accumulans mala malis, locum occupavit jam in aula, dum licentiam præbuit vel saltem permisit inimicis Domini Regis indictatis coram ejusdem justiciariis, et per inquisitionem convictis carceralique custodiæ mancipari per Justitiarios præceptis, tenere magna et solempnia convivia in aula nostra prædicta et habere ignem copiosum, vicarios in mensa sedentes graviter fumigantes.

Item idem Alanus, quod gravissime ferendum est, jurisdictionem nostram in perniciosum exemplum omnium cum quibus ecclesia habet seu habebit facere in futurum, pro travis seu aliis excessibus quæ contingent machinas usurpare. Magistrum Thomam de Brumpton, Rectorem scholarum nostrarum, clericum chori nostri habitum portantem, ad legendum et cantandum in tabula suo tempore honerandum, in quadam actione personali ad instantiam Galfridi de Sampton, clerici, contra consuetudinem ecclesiæ nostræ vocari fecit indebite, coram ipso; qui ipsum per me pluries requisitus a suo examine dimittere recusavit; qui in dicta causa usque ad primam convocationem, habito tractatu cum Dominis meis nunc præsentibus, videlicet, Magistris Waltero de Glovernia et Willelmo de Lincoln, supersedebit, nec aliquid contra dictum clericum nostrum attemptabit, donec in dicta convocatione coram quo convenire debeat sit discussum.

Ad hæc idem Alanus, ut verisimiliter creditur, mandatum et auctoritatem præbuit seneschallo Præpositi, qui fecit attachiari vicarium nostrum in cimiterio ecclesiæ nostræ, et alia enormia tangi suis temporibus reservata;

Et quum Domini mei nunc præsentibus et ego insufficientes sumus ad providendum et ordinandum in præmissis contra libertates, consuetudines et juramentum Præpositi attemptatis de remedio opportuno, vestræ dominationi placeat reverendæ consilium vestrum et modum initiandi procedendi et consulendi ecclesiæ nostræ jurisdictionique suæ, in scriptis transmittatis mihi, vestro, si fieri poterit, per præsentium portatorem.

authorised the Provost's steward to arrest one of our vicars in the churchyard. As I and my principals now here are not able to determine what is to be done, please write your advice.

We also hope that no answer will be given by the Chapter of York to appeals against our jurisdiction in the vacancy of the see; and that they will issue the usual writ to the officials &c. of the East Riding to obey our precepts, which they are very slack about.

John of Nas-sington to John of Risindon.

It was as you know agreed at the last convocation that the question of the Provost's officers should be postponed to next convocation, at which we hoped to have Robert of Pickering; and to which the Provost should be cited. But as Parliament will have much business I do not expect Pickering will come.

So I advise that, before the citations issue, the Chapter should send the articles and proposed date to Pickering and the other brethren there.

In York Chapter there are only two Canons now, through whom small matters are despatched, and I do not wish without Pickering to wake the sleeping dog. Do not be annoyed.

Quum Galfridum de Samp-ton clericum ad instantiam Magistri Thomæ de Brumpton, Magistri Scholarum nostrarum, pro eo, quod idem Galfridus infra territorium Beverlaci, in derogationem libertatum et consuetudinum ecclesiæ nostræ pariter et contemptum et in grave præjudicium et dispendium dicti Thomæ scholas fovet notorie adulterinas, per nos legitime suspensum, qui licet canonice monitus ab earum regimine hactenus desistere recusavit, propter ipsius manifestam offensam in sententiam excommunicationis quater in anno in ecclesia nostra provide latam in omnes libertates consuetudines et jura ecclesiæ nostræ qualitercunque infringentes vel etiam eadem ausu temerario violantes pronuntiamus dampnabiliter incidisse; juris ordine qui requiritur observato, ipsumque, claves ecclesiæ taliter contempnantem, animo fortius indurato, ab agendo coram nobis contra dictum Thomam duximus repellendum, justitia id poscente;

SCHOOLMASTER ASSESSED AND COLLECTOR OF ASSESSMENT FOR ARCHERS.

f. 4. Nominantur pro sagitariis ^b

^a This is the largest sum but one paid ; the only larger one being a payment of 4^s.

^b This is a very interesting entry apart from the notice of the Schoolmaster, as it shows in detail the way an army was got together in the 15th century. On 16 Aug., 1436, Beverley was called on to contribute to the army against Scotland 6 men-at-arms (homines armati) and 12 archers (sagittarii), 2 of the latter being assigned (assignati) by name to one named of the former. The town kept arms in stock, and these were distributed among the men-at-arms. Roger Rolleston, who was the chief of the Governors of the town for the year, having 2 pair of "vambrace," 1 pair "rerbrace," and 1 pair "poleyns," while William Petons had 1 "basenet," 1 "brest-plate," 1 pair "vaumbrace," 1 pair "rerbrace," and 1 pair of gloves or gauntlets (sertotecarum). Lund had a basenet, gauntlets, breast-plate, and pair of poleyns, and Rosyn a breast-plate, pair of rear-braces, gauntlets, and a pole-axe (polax), and so on. Certain persons in six groups varying from 7 to 14 in number, were assigned to find the armed men (nominantur pro armatis inveniendis versus Scotiam). Four groups are headed by 4, one group by 3, and another by 5 persons, making 24 in all, who are designated Governors. This is rather mysterious, as the real "Governors or Keepers" elected yearly were 12 in number only. The other 12 who had certain, or rather uncertain, functions in These arms are marked as returned, presumably at the end of the expedition.

connection with the Governors proper were inaccurately included. How much each group or each person in the group had to contribute we are not informed Six horses, varying in price from 11^s to 20^s, and one baggage horse at 20^s, were bought for the men-at-arms and delivered to their archers.

The 12 archers were given 20^s each, contributed by 12 divisions of the town called constabularies, named from the chief streets, viz. North Bar Without (Extra Barras Boriales), North Bar Within, Walkergate, Cornmarket, High Gate (Altavia), Lathgate, Fischmarkett, Keldegat archiepiscopi, the Provostry fee in Keldgate and Norwood (Feodum Præposituræ in Keldegat cum feodo præposituræ in Norwode), Flemmyng-gate, Barlyholm, the Provostry fee in Beckside (Feodum Præposituræ ad Torrentem), with the Chapter's Fee (Feodum capituli). The contributions fell somewhat unequally, as in North Bar Without 33 persons contributed to William Warner's 20^s, while in Fleming-gate 73 contributed the same sum to Roger Rose. In each of the constabularies one person named "with his companions (sociis)" unnamed, and probably three in number, collected the assessments. Those who contributed to find the men-at-arms did not contribute for the archers. The amounts paid by individuals varied from 2^s 6^d paid by John Coppandale in Archbishop's Keldgate to a penny paid by Margery Anlay in Cornmarket, but the amounts are only given in detail in 4 constabularies. In them 15 persons paid a shilling, one 14^d, three 16^d, two 20^d, one 2^s 2^d, and one 2^s 6^d, while 32 paid 2^d and one 1^d. As the assessor in each constabulary is one of the largest contributors, it may be supposed that the Schoolmaster was one of the most substantial inhabitants of Keldgate.

For the necessarie reparacions of whiche church, long tyme syns, there was geven and assured certaine landes and wooddes, amountinge to the yerelie value of three score poundes and above, whiche landes and woodes by the saide statute were not geven to your heighnes, nor are not within the compas of the same statute, notwithstanding, most gracious soveraigne lorde, that ever syns the dissolucion of the said colledge, all the rentes and proffites of the same hath byn received to your Majesties use, by reason whereof the saide church is in grete decaye, and in shorte space is very like to fall into utter ruyn and decaie, the parrishioners not being liable to repayre the same.

Furthermore, pleaseth it your grace to understande, that the said towne of Beverley is a market towne and the greatest within all Estryding of your Majesties countie of York, having a grete nombre of youthe within the same, and fyfe thowsaund persons and above, whereof some of them be apte and mete to be brought up in learning, whiche are not, for so muche as there is neither gramer schole, or any other schole, as yet founded, wherewith they might be brought up in any vertuous studdie.

For present remedy whereof it may pleas your grace, of

To the right honorable the lordes of the Kinges Majestyes privye counsayle.

May it lyke your most honorable lordshippes to understand, that according to your comaundmentes to us given by your letters, we have considered the petition of th'inhabitant^s of the towne of Beverleye, and by the serche of recordes towching the Kinges title to the premisses, we find the same landes, which they make sute for, to be the possessions of the collegiate churche of Beverleye, and therefore we think the Kinges Majestye to have verie good right and title to the same landes, that they demaund by force of the statute made in the firste yere of his highnes reigne, concerning colleges and chaunteryes. Nevertheless we find by serche of the certificate made by the commissioners for the surveye of chaunteryes, remayning of record in his highnes courte, wherein we serve, that there was an office called the office of the woorkes within the same collegiate chirche, whiche had landes and tenementes and other proffettes to the yerelye valewe of £68 os. 12*d.* assigned, and with the proffettes thereof th'officer of the workes did from tyme to tyme repayre the said chirch, being also a parisshe chirche, and was accomptable to the college for the same. This is all we

Where as Edmund Browne, Scolemaister of the free scole founded within the town of Ripon, parcell of the duchie of Lancaster in the countie of Yorke, hath to him appointed an annuell and yerely pension of £8 7s. 2d. going oute of certeyne lands and tenements geven for the sustentacion and mainteynaunce of the said free Scole to be continued to him for and during his lyfe.

And forasmuch as the Kings Maiestie by the advise of his counsell of his Duchie of Lancaster hath demised and lett to farme by Indenture under the Seale of his said Duchie bearing date the xxvjth daie of November in the fourth yere of his raigne, all and singular the lands tenements and other hereditaments geven and appointed for the sustentacion and mayntenaunce of the said free Scole as aforesaid. CARILL.

BILL IN COURT OF DUCHY OF LANCASTER TO RECOVER
SCHOOL LANDS FROM EDMOND BROWNE, SCHOOLMASTER.

[From Record Office, Duchy of Lancaster, Depositions and Examinations
Edward VI., vol. 61, R. 7.]

TO the Right Worshipfull Sir John Gates, of the Honorable Order of the Garter, knight, and chauncellor of the Doche of Lancaster.

1553.

In there most humble wyse sheweth and complayneth unto your good mastership your orators the Inhabytaunts and parisshioners of the Towne and parishe of Ryppon in the county of Yorke that where one tenement [&c., setting out the parcels as in lease to Browne] were gyven and assured for the fyndynge and erectynge of a Free Scole of old tyme founded and erected wythin the said Towne of Ryppon by dyvers discrete and well disposed of the inhabytaunts and parisshioners of the said parishe, which said scole was there founded and erected, and syns the fyrst ordinaunce thereof hath been contynwed, and one Scole Maister from tyme to tyme hath byn chosen and placed wythin the said Free Scole by the sub-stancyall and dyscrete parishioners of Ryppon aforesaide there found and mayntained wyth the issue and profetes of the said mesuages lands tenements and other the premisses, as farre as the same wold extend; and where they wold not, the same was fulfilled of the devocion of the parissioners.

And the issues and the profytts of the said premisses to the said uses employed, untill now of late that one Edmond Browne, clarke, late Scole Mayster there, appoynted by the said parisshe, beyenge very neclygent in his office, and not wylling to applye his scolers accordyng as to his duety apperteyned, and beyeng admonessed and warned thereof by the dyscrete parissioners of the said parish, the sayd Edmond Browne of a froward mynde intynding to enfrynge the said assurances made for the contynvance of the sayd Free Scole aforesayd, gave enformacion unto this Honorable Court that all the sayd lands were the King's Maiestie's in the Ryght of the sayd Douche, and that his Highnes by the officers of this honorable Courte shold and ought to have the order and lettyng of the same; and upon the same untrue surmyse obteyned a lease of the premisses under the Seale of this Honorable Courte made to the said Sir Edmond for terme of his lyff, if he soe longe were Scole Maister there, payeng therefore yerely the rent of £8. 7. 2. And further procured an order in this Honorable Courte that the Receyveurs and Audytours of the same possessions myght yerely defalke and allowe him retayning into his hands the sayd rent for his salerye, soe longe as he were Scolemaister there, as by the same order remayning for record in this Honorable Courte apperith.

Wherefore the said Edmond entryd into the said landes and the same occupied ever syns And hath not made any reparacions of the howses of the same, where by they be commen in great ruyne and decaye, soe that the occupyours of the same wyll not paye any rent for the same tyll reparacions thereof be made.

By reason whereof the same Edmond, wyllinge to make amends for his sayd untrue informacion, gave and assigned his interest in the premysses to the parissioners of the parishe aforesaid, paying him the rent conteyned in the seyde lease, to the intent they shold amende and repayre the reperacions of the same to the fyndyng of the scole aforeseyd; which they at his hands have accepted and yet dare not meddle with the occupacion thereof untill suche tyme as the Kyng's Maiestie's possessyon, gotten upon his untrue surmyse, wythout any juste tittle, may be by lawfull order amoved from the same, and the sayd lease here ready to be delyvered in this Honorable Courte may be cancelled and adnychyllated accordynge to equitie and justice.

In consideracion whereof and forasmuch as Free Scoles and all lands and tenements belonginge to the same are not wythin the compasse or daunger of the late Acte of Chauntres nor the Kyng's Maiestie entytled thereby to the same; And further that all the premisses were of old tyme gyven for the fyndynge of a Free Scole & mayntenaunce of the Maister of the same, and the same hath been contynually mayntayned & the profytts of the premisses employed for the same porposse;

It may therefore please your good Maistership to graunt your sayd oratours the King's Maiestie's comysion to be dyrected to some worshipfull gentlemen, as your maistership shall nomynate or appoynt, auctorysyng them by the same, as well to examen all suche wytnes as shalbe brought before them for the trewe tryall of the premisses, as to receyve all suche wrytings as shalbe brought before them for the same & otherwyse to trye the truthe thereon by all due cyrcostance, & to sertyfie their procedyngs into the King's Maiesties Honorable Courte of Duchie Chamber at Westminster, at a certen daye by your Maistership in the sayd comysion to be lymetted and appoynted to them, that your oratours may then and there receyve and have at your maisterschippes hands suche order for the avoyding of the said supposed interest of Our Soveraygn lorde the Kyng as also for the havynge and enjoyeing of the premysses for the contynuall mayntenaunce of the sayd Free Scole as is aforesayd. And also that your sayd oratours may have and enjoie the premysses accordynge as they have before had, for the intent before remembred, as to justyce, equitye doth apperteyne.

And your said oratours shall dayly pray for the preservation of your good Maistership in health long to endure.

Breve in the vijth of Julie 1579.

TO the Right Honorable Sir Rauffe Sadler, knight, one of the Quenes Maiesties most Honorable Privie Councill, Chancellor of his Heighenes Duchie of Lancaster.

Humbly complayninge sheweth unto your honor your dailie Oratours Sir William Mallorye, knight, and others the Inhabitants and parissioners of the Towne and parisshe of Ripon in the countye of Yorke, being parcell of the possessions of His Hieghenes Duchie of Lancaster at the tyme of the makinge of the Statute of Chauntries in the firste yeare of Kinge Edward the Sixt.

That whereas your said Oratours in the late Raigne of our said souveraine lord of godlye memory Kinge Edward the sixt exhibited humble sute and petition to the Chauncellor and Counsell of this Courte conteyninge that wheare one Tene-ment and five acres of land in Neyther Studley in the counte of Yorke then or late in the tenure or occupacion of Raynold Rounthwaite :

And also one message in Annesgate within the towne of Ripon aforesaid then or late in the tenure of John Coke [and other premises as in lease to Edmund Browne] ; and one house in Anesgate aforesaid called the Rodehouse or schole house weare geven and assured for the common findeing and mayntenans of one free schole, of ould tyme founded and erected in the said Towne of Rypon by the well disposed persons of the inhabitants and parisshoners of the said Towne and parishe of Rypon aforesaid, and that the Issues and proffits thereof had bene contynually imploied and bestowed upon one discreete and well learned schole master theare, electe and chosen from tyme to tyme, as neade required, by the substanciall and discret persons of the said parisshes.

And further alledged in the said Bill and petition that one Edmund Browne, clerke, gave untrue Informacion to this Courte that the said premisses weare parcell of the possessions of our said late sovereign lord Kinge Edward the Sixt as parcell of the said Duchie, for the true and perfect tryall whereof a Commission was awarded out of this Court to certaine men of worshippe being Commissioners indifferentlye assigned and appointed as well on the parte and behalf of our said late sovereigne lord Kinge Edward the Sixt as of your Oratours, to examyn, heare and trye by all waies meanes and circumstances they could, the truthe of the said matter, which Commissioners the same fully and plainly certified into this Courte in due forme, and publicacion thereupon graunted accordingle and the same matter fully and plainly heard and examyned before the Chauncellor and Councell of this Courte ;

forsomuch as upon the hearinge thereof before the sayd Chauncellor and Councell in or aboute the tearme of Hil-larye in or aboute the first yeare of the late quene Marye, yt did plainly and evidentlye appeare to the said Chauncellor and Councell, as well by certaine deposicions certified by the same Commissioners as by other proves, that there had ben a Free Schole in the said Towne of Ripon by a longe tyme, and that the said premisses was of auneyent tyme geven and assigned by the discreete and well disposed parisssheners of the parishe of Ripon for the mayntenaunce of the said Schole, and the issues and proffitts thereof had bene by like tyme so imploied and bestowed for and towards the findeinge of one good and sufficient Schole master theare, yt was then ordered and decreed by the Chauncellor and Councell of the said Courte that the said Schole should be and contynue a Free Schole for ever And that eight or tenne or thereabouts of the beste disposed, discreete and moste substanciall of the said Towne and parishe should from tyme to tyme, as neade should requier, assigne name and appointe a good, honest, vertuous, and well learned Scholemaister to teache the said Schole for the erudicion and vertuous bringinge upp of the children theare. And that the said persons should have the order rule and letting of the said premisses at their will and pleasure, and perceave and take the yssues thereof forever, to the use and behoffe of the said Scholemaster and schollers for the tyme being, as other necessities toucheinge and concerninge the said Schole, or for the Reparacion of the said premisses, and for the mayntenans and contynuens of the said Schole to be kepte in good order and government, and by good honest vertuous and discreete and well learned Scholemasters, to the increas of vertue and erudicion and bringing up of Infants, children and other Schollers that shall come to learne and be taught in the said schole.

And the same order to stand in force as long as the premisses should be imploied to the uses and intents aforesaid. Or els for misordering thereof or discontynuinge of the findeinge of the said Scholemaster the Chauncellor and Councell of the Courte for the tyme being should take order for the redresse, reformation and amendement thereof, so as the same schole might be mayntayned kept and contynued accordinge to the true meaning of the said order, for ever.

And further as by the same decree exemplified under the seale of this honourable Courte, and readye to be shewed to your Honor, dothe and maye appeare.

The which said schole hathe ever sythens bene kepte and maynteyned with the proffitts of the said premisses amonge other thinges according to the true meaning of the said order and decree above mencioned.

But nowe, so yt ys, yf yt maye pleas your Honor, the said order and decree above mencioned notwithstandinge, one

Ninian Middleton and Charles Wharton, being persons of lewde disposicion, pretending the same premisses to be concealed lands from His Maiestie, haue and doe, most wrongfullye and without any color of title at all made unto the premisses, not only threaten your oratours fearmours and tenants of the premisses, occupieing the same under the title of your said orators, with arrestes, sutes and suche like trobles; and for that purpose have made a lease for yeares of parcell of the same premisses unto one Thomas Middleton, mindinge therbye to eject your said orators from the same, which said Thomas Middleton hathe alreadye commensced suit at the common lawe before his Maiesties justices of his Benche at Westminster by ejectment against one William Siggeswick and John Johnson, two poore tenants of parcell of the said premisses under the title of your orators, who enjoye the same by force of the said decree of this Courte, contrarye to all right, equite, and good consciens, and to the decaye and utter subversion of the said Free Schole above mencyoned, excepte your Honours accustomed ayde and assistance be unto your said orators extended.

DEFENDANT'S ANSWER.

THE answeare of Ninian Medelton, defendant, to the bill of complainte of Sir Wylliam Mallorye, Knyght and other compleynants.

The said defendant saith that the said bill of complaint is verye untrew, and insufficient in the lawe to be answered unto, for dyverse causes and matters therein conteyned and devised, imagined and exhibited unto this honorable Courte, by the procurement, as this defendant supposeth, of one Wylliam Burton, an attorney of the comon lawe, in the favor and behalf of one Christofer Watson, his father-in-lawe, whoe did and doth pretend tytell to all the landes in the bill mencioned, and withowte the knowledge of the said Sir William Mallorye, Knight, of meare malice only, of intent and purpose to discreditte the said defendantes mencioned in the said bill, and to werye and delaye them with wrongfull vexacious costes chardges and expenses in lawe.

[First answer that the lands are not in the Duchy and therefore the Court had no jurisdiction; but if he is compelled to answer] that before the tyme of the statute made in primo Edwardi sexti for dissolucion of chauntries, colleges, guilds, &c., there was a guilde or fraternytye in Ryppon aforesaid, which was commonlye named the Rood Guild, founded by the inhabytants of Ryppon, by licence to them graunted in anno nono Henrici quarti, or thereabowtes, and by the same they weare lycensed to gyve for the maynteynance thereof sextene messuages and eleven acres of lande; which guilde or fraternitye was founded accordinglie, and to the said guild or fraternetye the said howse, then and now called and knowne by the name of the Roode howse, the said acre of lande then and now called and knowne by the name of the Roode greate acre, and all other the landes and tenementes recyted in the said surmysed bill, did belonge and apperteyne, and weare, wythin the time lymitted by the said statute, used and occupied as the lands tenements and hereditaments belong to the said guilde, and weare and yet still are comonly called or known by the name of the Rood landes [and therefor belonged to the King].

And the said laite kinge being not informed of the trowth of his tittle therein, but beinge kepte secrete by the inhabitants of the said towne of Ryppon, abowte the secounde yeare of the Reaigne of the said lord kinge a comyssion was procured by some of the inhabitants of the said towne directed to some of the inhabitants of the said towne, and others, beinge all, or the most parte of them, bretheren of the said guilde, to survey such lands and tenements in Ryppon as weare given to the said laite kinge by the said statute. At which tyme one William Scott, Anthony Frankyshe and others of the said towne of Ryppon (as this defendant doth crediblye understande) craftilie intendinge and meanyng to disinherit and defraude the said laite kinge, his heirs and successors, of the said guild and the lands tenements and hereditaments thereunto belonginge, did practyce and procure one Rychard Tyrrie, being then one of the prists of the said guilde, that he should be contented to staye and not to gyve upp the said landes unto the Commissioners as belonginge to the said guilde, but that he wold suffer them to gyve information that the same was scole landes, promisinge him that if he wold be so contented, to gyve him sex poundes thirtene shillings and fower pence.

By and upon whose procurement he was contented to suffer them so to doe; wheareupon the said William Scott [etc.] did gyve an untrewre informacion unto the said Comysioners that the same was scole landes, prayinge the said

Comysshioners to appointe the same to contynewe to a scole for ever, which they wold not, but said they would sertifie the same landes according to ther informacion.

And afterwarde, abowte anno quarto of the said laite king, the said Edmond Browne in the said bill named, then beinge one of the vicars in the churche of Ryppon, and teachinge a scole theare, one Anthony Frankesshe and others of the said inhabytants of Ryppon, sekinge to displace the said Browne wythowte any just cause, he the said Browne understandinge the said informacion gyven unto the said Comysshioners by the said inhabitants to be false and untrew, did make his repaire unto the then Chancellor of the Duchie, and did informe hyme the trowth thereof opon whose informacion and sewte the said Browne hadd as this defendant supposeth a lease granted unto him by the said then Chancellor of the said lands, falselie supposed and certified to be scole landes, for the terme of 21 yeares, which Browne did demyse and graunte over to certen persons and inhabitants there, dyvers parcellis of the said landes, and afterwarde some of the said inhabitants as the said William Scott [etc.] havinge intelligence that the said Browne had such a lease, the better to kepe secrett and color and mainteyne ther subtill devises and practise, did fale to compencion wyth the said Browne for his said lease and his interest therein, and did paye hyme tenne poundes in hand for the same, and fortie shillings yearlie during his terme ; which fortie shillings was paide hyme accordingle, three or fower yeares, untill such tyme as he the said Browne, upon the earnest request and motion of certen the inhabytants there and other his frendes, was contented to release the payement of the said fortie shillings yearlie ;

and they havinge thus craftelie handled the matter, and yet nevertheless standinge chardged for the payment of the yearlie rent reserved upon the said lease unto the Kings Maiestie, and also havinge procured and perswaded the said Browne not any further to informe for and on the behalf of the Kinge's Maiestie, they the said inhabytants thereupon did exhibit unto the then Chancelor and Councell of the said Duchie, there said untrew and surmysed sewte and petition in manner and forme as in there said bill of complainte is alleged ; and thearbie procured a comission to suche persons, who, before that tyme, viz. in or aboute secundo Edwardi Sexti, had untrewlie sertified the said landes to be scole landes ; which said Commissioners the better to collor and maintayne theire former certificat, wythout havinge respecte eyther to the goodnes of the Kinges maiestie's tytell touching the said landes, or withowte the dewe and trewe examynacions of wytnesses for & on his maiesties behalf, did certifie unto the said Courte of the Duchie the said landes, of right belonging to the guilde to be scole landes, in manner and forme as in the said bill ys alledged; and thereupon the said then Chancellor and Councell, noe person then standing against them nor alledginge any matter in defence thereof, the said order and decree was by them set down, by coller wheareof the said plaintiffes and inhabitants ever sithens withoute jest tyle of right, have intruded upon the same premisses, and resceyved and taken the issues and profetts of the said landes and other the premisses in the said bill of complainte mentioned, to their owne private gains and comodytie, which they could not nor ought not to doe, albeyt the allegations conteyned in their said surmysed bill weare trewe, as in dede they are not.

For, as this defendant supposeth, that abowte the thirde or fowerthe yeares of the reaignes of the laite King Philippe and Quene Marye, the said inhabytants, or some of them, purchased a graunte and foundation of a free scole from the said laite King and Queen and thearby hadd assured to certene feoffees of whom the said Sir William Mallorye was one, and to their heires, to the uses of the said free scole, foure chauntries in Rippon, as appeareth by the said graunte, wyth all or dyverse landes and tenements to them belonging, amountinge in yearly value, to be lett to the most benefyte of the scole and scolemaister, to the some of thirtie pounds, or above, the said landes and tenements untrewely supposed in the said bill to be scole landes, beinge not conteyned within the same graunte, neyther any parte thereof, as by the said graunte and foundation remeayninge of recorde more plainly is to be shewed: which chauntries and said landes so gyven to thuse aforesaid are not used, as this defendant supposeth, accordinge to the true intent and meayninge of the foundation thereof maid by the said lait King and Quene, neyther the issues and profettes thereof imploied to the most benefyte of the scole maister, but one Christofer Watson and Frauncys Healey, or one of theym, throughe the sufferances of the said feffees, or some of theym, have of longe tyme and yet styll doe take and perceive the comodities and profetts thereof under collor of payinge scolemaister only the yearlie stypend of £12, to their owne privaite gaines and uses to the utter subversion, overthrowe and decay of the said free scole, as ys dewlie to be proved;

And this defendant further saith, that abowte twoe or three yeares since yt was found by a comyssion awarded owte of the Exchequer that the Quenes maiestie was seased of the said landes and tenements aforementioned, and that the same weare conceyled as by the said comyssion and certifcate of dyvers deposicions remeaninge of recorde in the said Courte, more at large appeareth, and the Quenes maiestie, so being thereof seased, did by her gracious lettres patents under the great seale of England, bearing daite the 18th daye of Marche in the 19th yeare of the Quene's maiestie's reaigne, that now ys, did amonges other thinges gyve and graunte the said premysses with the appertenances to Peter Grey, esquier, and Edward Greye, his sonne, and to the heires of the said Peter, Reservinge a certen yearly rente therefore to her and her successors as by the said letters patent more at lardge appearith.

By force wheareof they were thereof seased unto theim and the heires of the said Peter Grey accordingle; whose estaite and interest therein this defendant and the said Charles Wharton nowe, and long before the said bill exhibited, by good conveyance in the lawe, have, and they so being lawfullie seased if the said premisses to them and their heires, did make the said lease mencioned in the said bill, for the tryall of their tytyle in and to the same. [Constitutiones legatinæ Reginaldi Poli cardinalis, legati a latere, archiepiscopi Cantuariensis. Wilkins' Concilia, iv. 125.]

De pueris educandis in ecclesiis. Decretum undecimum.

Every cathedral church to keep a certain number, a kind of seminary, of boys, none under eleven or twelve, with a preference for the poorer, able to read and write. To be taught grammar and church learning.

STATUTUM est, ut singulæ hujus regni metropolitani et cathedrales ecclesiæ certum puerorum numerum, vel seminarium quoddam, pro cujusque proventu et diocesis magnitudine alere teneantur. In hunc autem numerum non coaptabuntur, nisi qui annos undecim vel duodecim ad minimum nati sint, quique pauperes potius parentes, quam divites, habeant, qui bonæ indolis ac spei sint; qui legere et scribere sciant. Erudiendi sunt hii in grammatica, et in ecclesiastica disciplina diligenter instituendi.

Horum duæ erunt classes; altera provectiores ætate et doctrina continebit, qui acolythi sint; hisque, præter victum

^a This appears from internal evidence to have been written in the monastery of Ferrieres under Abbot Aldric by an anonymous person, who derived his information from Sigulf, one of Alcuin's pupils, who preceded Aldric as abbot. As Aldric became Bishop of Sens in 829, the life is thus nearly contemporary. It was printed, according to Mabillon, from an MS. contemporary with the author, at Rheims.

et togam annuam, quam liberatem^a vocant, aliquid etiam mercedis constituetur; in altera juniores erunt, quibus toga tantum et mensa dabitur. Incedent autem omnes, utriusque sint classis, cum tonsura et vestitu clericali, eodemque vivendi modo utentur et divinis in ecclesia officiis inservient.

Ex acolythorum classe quicumque ad ætatem legitimam pervenerint, et moribus literisque profecerint, sacris initiabuntur ordinibus, et in quocunque ecclesiæ ministerio episcopo et capitulo visum fuerit, operam suam præstabunt; hisque pro cujusque merito de beneficio aliquo providebitur, quorum in locum alii ex inferiori classe substituentur.

Licebit etiam extra hunc numerum aliis ejusdem civitatis et diocesis pueris una cum his in grammatica et literis erudiri, dummodo honesti sint, eodemque vestitu et moribus utantur, qui item in locum clericorum, qui quocunque modo desiderabuntur, substituentur.

Quousque autem certa dos huic operi assignabitur, archiepiscopi et episcopi omnes fructuum annuorum, quos ex proventibus episcopatum suorum percipiunt, deductis decimis, subsidiis et feudis, quadragesimam partem cum ad ipsos pueros alendos, tum etiam ad mercedem solvandam magistris, qui eos in grammatica et ecclesiastica doctrina erudient, in singulos annos pendunt. Quod item ut ab omnibus, qui præbendas vel beneficia quæcumque ecclesiastica aut jam obtinent, aut posthac obtinebunt, fiat. Statutum est auctoritate, scilicet, ut ex fructibus beneficiorum suorum quæ, vel singula vel plura, simul ad annum censum viginti librarum ascendent, partem quadragesimam ad hos ipsos usus in ea diocesi, in qua beneficia obtinent, quotannis persolvant. Exigetur autem quadragesima hæc pars ab his, qui per episcopum, decanum et capitulum quibus scholæ cura committitur, ad hoc erunt designati.

Docendi munus nemo imposterum quovis in loco suscipere audeat, nisi ab ordinario examinatus, probatusque, et de libris, quos legere debet, ante admonitus fuerit; alioquin excommunicationis pœnam incurrat, et a docendo per triennium prohibeatur. Ex hiis vero qui jam docendi munus exercent, si quis indignus fide doctrina vel moribus repertus fuerit, ejiciatur; sin dignus, confirmetur.

Two classes.

1. Acolytes, to receive livery, food, and small stipend;

2. Juniors, to receive livery and food only.

The acolytes to be promoted to benefices according to their merits.

Other boys may be taught with these, but must conform in life and clothes.

Until a fixed endowment is provided, every bishop to pay $\frac{1}{40}$ th of his net income; and everyone with prebend or benefice above £20 a year, the like.

No one to teach anywhere until examined and approved by the ordinary, and the books to be read appointed. Any present teacher found unfit in learning or character to be ejected, otherwise to be confirmed.

^a This must be a mis-reading for liberaturam, livery.
